INTRODUCTION.

Charles E. Tuttle - 12-50

ALTHOUGH in common with other kindred minds, I have long regarded the high destinies of my ancestral name as a valuable inheritance, I should not have bestowed so long a period of labor to the subject of the following pages, had not information, circulated through various channels, both in Europe and the United States reached me, that a large property belonging to my family was lying in Great Britain awaiting a call from its legitimate owners. On making inquiry into particulars, I furthermore was apprized that this property had belonged to Sir Richard Townley, whose daughter Mary was married to Joseph Lawrence, of Flushing, in or about the year 1690. Charles Townley, the father of Richard, took part with the friends of religious freedom against the treacherous and oppressive measures of Charles the First, of England, and fell at the battle of Marston Moor, when the defenders of liberty (under Cromwell) prostrated the fanatical adherents of that crowned tyrant. On the restoration of that old dynasty under Charles the Second, England presented a scene of implacable hostility to all who were connected by blood or interest with the government or fortunes of the late Protector. Charles Townley was dead and his effects were long since disposed of, but his son, Sir Richard, possessed of a large estate, became the subject of merciless sequestration. It is now said that the spoils of this savage warfare, have been held in some public depository; and under the milder influence of succeeding monarchs, is yet attainable by such as can exhibit an authenticated title to them. To me it has seemed that this amelioration of a policy which stained the character of Charles the Second and his government, is rendered probable by the fact that Francis Howard, who married the youngest sister of Mary Townley, namely, Dorothy Townley, was afterwards made Baron Howard, of Effingham, and on the 8th of December, 1731, received further honor by being created first Earl of Effingham. And it is from this connection that the name of Effingham Lawrence has attained a frequency on this side of the Atlantic, amongst the family down to the present day. I have introduced these facts and probabilities, to show what incitements led me on to investigate the records yet accessible, in order to sustain my own pretensions to the property of Mary Townley, from whom I am lineally and legitimately descended. In the course of this investigation, I have met with inducements to pursue the subject upon a broader field; for I have perceived in the position which the descendants of the three brothers, emigrants from Europe, namely, John, William, and Thomas Lawrence, have sustained of honor, dignity and distinction, that I trust it will be regarded as a venial offence if pride of family has led me into inquiries beyond my first intentions, to gather up from previous publications, and from every other source of information, an entire Genealogy of the original transatlantic pioneers of this family down to the present time. In the expenditure of making known to others the result of this now widely extended labor, I have hopes of being aided by many not interested in the Townley Estate, and to make the following details worthy of their patronage, I have traced them with a determination to be accurate throughout. Doubtless it will be found as has been already discovered in previous publications upon the same subject, that in a family distributed throughout Europe, Asia, and America, wherever freedom of conscience and beneficent civilization is predominant, many retired individuals will have escaped notice ; and in order to enable such of them as are desirous of being numbered with the rest in my future repetition of this my first effort, I have given to each family reservation blank pages at the conclusion of its letter-press matter, to fill up by their manuscript additions, whatever is deficient in the present text. I invite all such to aid me in any further edition.

And I present to them as a security on my part, deserving of their confidence, the correctness of this compilation.

THOMAS LAWRENCE,

of Providence, R. I.

NEW YORK, July 4, 1858.

Genealogy.

THE patronymic of our family is of great antiquity, having originated with the Latins. Several members of the family of Lawrence have held and still hold responsible and distinguished stations, as well in the Church and civil service, as in the Army and Navy of the British empire; and many branches, also, have intermarried with the clergy and nobility.

The first ancestors of this family, of which we have any knowledge, was SIR ROBERT LAWRENCE, of Ashton Hall, in Lancastershire, England. It may perhaps be interesting to this family to know that there is a marriage between a grandson of this gentleman and the Washington family. Sir James Lawrence and Matilda Washington, in the reign of Henry III. Lawrence Washington purchased the property at Mount Vernon about 1743, after his return from the expedition to Carthage, where he had served under the celebrated Admiral Vernon, and in honor of whom he named his country seat. General Washington inherited Mount Vernon from his half-brother, Lawrence Washington, with whom he was a favorite. Lawrence Washington died at the early age of 34 years, and was interred in the old vault on his estate. Sir Robert Lawrence accompanied Richard Coeur de Leon in his famous expedition to Palestine, where he signalized himself in the memorable siege of St. Jean d' Acre, in 1119, by being the first to plant the banner of the cross on the battlements of that town, for which he received the honors of knighthood from King Richard, and also a coat of arms (this coat of arms is still preserved, impressed on the seal appended to a document of William Lawrence, 1680, and also Richard Lawrence, 1711, preserved in the Surrogate's Office, New York City,) at the same time. After this the family became eminent in England, so much so, that Sir John Lawrence, the ninth in lineal descent from the above Sir Robert Lawrence, possessed thirty-four manors, the revenue of which amounted, in 1491, to £6,000 sterling per annum. Having, however, killed a gentleman-usher of King Henry VII., he was outlawed, and died an exile in France, issueless, when Ashton Hall and his other estates passed, by royal decree, to his relatives, Lord Monteagle and Gerard.

Henry Lawrence, one of the patentees of land on the Connecticut river, granted in 1635, and who, with Lords Say, Seal, and Brooke, Sir Arthur Hasselrigg, Richard Saltonstall, George Fenwick, and Henry Darley, commissioned John Winthrop, Jr., as governor over this territory, with the following instructions: "To provide able men for making fortifications and building houses at the mouth of the Connecticut river, and the harbor adjoining; first, for their own present accommodation, and then such houses as may receive men of quality, which latter houses we would have to be builded within the fort." This was the same expedition in which Lion Gardiner was appointed chief engineer. The above individuals intended to accompany John Winthrop, Jr., to America, but were prevented by a decree of Charles I.

The above Henry Lawrence was of some considerable distinction in England during Cromwell's time. He was born in the year 1600, entered a fellow-commoner at Emanuel College, Cambridge, 1622, retired to Holland to escape the persecution of bishops and their courts; was member of parliament for Westmoreland in 1641, but withdrew when the life of the king began to be in jeopardy from the independents. In a curious old pamphlet printed in the year 1660, entitled, "The mystery of the good old cause is briefly unfolded in a catalogue of the members of the late Long Parliament that held office, both civil and military, contrary to the self-denying ordinance," is the following passage: "Henry Lawrence, a member of the Long Parliament, fell off at the murder of his majesty, for which the Protector, with great zeal, declared that a neutral spirit was more to be abhorred than a cavalier spirit, and that such men as he were not fit to be used in such a day as that, when God was cutting down kingship root and branch." Yet he came into play again, and contributed much to the setting up of the Protector, for which worthy service he was made and continued Lord President of the Protector's Council, being also one of the Lords of the other House. In 1646, he published, at Amsterdam, his book, entitled, "Book of our Communion and Warre with Angels," and a "Treatise on Baptism," the same year. He married Amy, daughter of Sir Edward Peyton, Bart., of Iselham, in Cambridgeshire. He leased his estates at St. Ives, from the year 1631 to 1636, to Oliver Cromwell, to whom he was second cousin. He was twice returned as member of parliament for Hertfordshire, in 1653 and 1654; and once for Colchester borough in Essex, in 1656; his son Henry representing Caernarvonshire the same year. He was President of the Council in 1656, and gazetted as "lord of the other house" in December, 1657. He proclaimed, after the death of Cromwell, his son Richard as his successor. In a Harlaem manuscript, No. 1460, there is a drawing of all the ensigns and trophies won in battle by Oliver, which is dedicated to his councillors, and ornamented with their arms; amongst these are those of Henry Lawrence, the Lord President. The motto "Nil Admirari," appears to have been assumed by the president during the revolutionary troubles, probably on his being made a councillor. A picture of the president is inserted in Clarendon's history of the rebellion. His gravestone, not yet effaced, is in the chapel of St. Margaret's, alias Thele, in Hertfordshire. There may be clearly traced on it the arms, viz.: a cross, raguly gules, the crest, a fish's tail or demidolphin. A letter directed by him to Sir Simon d'Ewes, is sealed with a small red seal, cross raguly gules, the same crest, and a Lion in the Chief, as borne by the St. Ives family.

While the Dutch were prosecuting their settlements on Long Island and in New York, the English settlers slowly infused themselves among the Dutch population of the island; among which were three brothers, John, William, and Thomas Lawrence, ancestors of a numerous and enterprising family in this country. These three brothers, as well as the above Henry Lawrence, were all descended from John Lawrence, who died in 1538, and was buried in the Abbey of Ramsay. In corroboration of the relationship between Henry Lawrence and the above named brothers, we find on the seals appended to their wills, now on file at New York, and on old plate still possessed by their descendants, the same crest and arms as those upon the tomb of the lord president.

DESCENDANTS OF JOHN LAWRENCE.

1 John Lawrence, the eldest of the three brothers mentioned above, who emigrated to this country, was born at Great St. Alban's, Hertfordshire, England, in 1618, coming over in the ship Planter, Nicholas Travis, master, in company with Gov. Winthrop, Jr., and landing at Plymouth, Massachusetts, in 1635. He removed from thence to Ipswich, where, after residing some time, he removed to Long Island. He became, in 1644, one of the patentees of Hempstead, on that island, under grant from the Dutch governor, Kieft. He, together with his brother William, and sixteen others, in the following year, obtained the patent of Flushing from the same governor, and were also among those to whom the confirmatory patent was issued by Governor Nicoll, in February 16, 1666, to wit: John Lawrence, alderman of the city of New York; Richard Cornhill, justice of the peace; Charles Bridges, William Lawrence, Robert Terry, William Noble, John Ffobvush, Elias Doughty, Robert Ffield, Edmund Ffarington, John Maston, Anthony Ffield, Philip Udall, Thomas Styles, Benjamin Ffield, William Pidgeon, John Adams, John Hinckman, Nicolas Parcell, Tobias Ffeeks, and John Bowne, patentees for, and in behalf of themselves and their associates, the freeholders, inhabitants of the town of Flushing, their heirs, successors and assigns, for ever, all that certain town in the North Riding of Yorkshire, upon Long Island, called by the name of Flushing, situate, lying and being on the north side of the said island; which said town hath a certain tract of land belonging thereto, and bounded westward, beginning at the mouth of a creek, and from thence including a certain neck of land called Tew's Neck, to run eastward as far as Matthew Garrison's Bay, from the head or middle whereof a line is to be run south-east, in length about three miles, and about two miles in breadth, as the land hath been surveyed and laid out by virtue of an order made at the general meeting held at Hempstead, in the month of March, 1665 ; and that there be the same latitude in breadth on the south side as on the north, to run in two direct lines southward, to the middle of the hills, to the bounds between the said towns of Flushing and Jamaica." Removing, in 1658, from Long Island, he settled permanently at New Amsterdam. In 1663, we find him appointed by Governor Stuyvesant, one of the commissioners to treat with the General Court at Hartford, in relation to the boundaries between New England and the Dutch provinces. He was appointed, in 1665, one of the first aldermen of New York, on its incorporation under Nicolls, the first English governor after the conquest. He was also appointed, in 1672, mayor of the city of New York, and in 1674, one of his Majesty's Council, in which office he continued, by successive appointments, till 1698. He was again appointed mayor in 1691, and in 1692 judge of the Supreme Court, in which office he remained till his death in 1699. By his wife Susanna, who survived him, he had issue :

2 First, Joseph, who died a widower, leaving a daughter, who died young.

2 Second, John, who married Sarah, widow of Thomas Willett, first mayor of New York, by whom he had no issue.

2 Third, Thomas, died unmarried.

2 Fourth, Susanna, who married Gabriel Minvielle, one of the council of the province, and mayor of New York, and, after his death, William Smith, one of the aldermen of New York. She survived both husbands, and had no issue.

2 Fifth, Martha, who married Thomas Snawsell, one of the aldermen of New York, and died without issue.

2 Sixth, Mary, married William Whittinghame, a graduate of Harvard University, in 1660 (for account of whose ancestry see collections of Historical Society of Massachusetts).

3 MARY, a daughter by this marriage, distinguished by her literary acquirements, and the gifts she bestowed upon Harvard and Yale Colleges, became the wife of Gorden Saltonstall, governor of Connecticut, and died 1730.—See notice of her in Knap's Female Biography, p. 453.

DESCENDANTS OF WILLIAM LAWRENCE.

1 William Lawrence, the second brother, was born at Great St. Alban's, Hertfordshire, England, in 1623. He embarked, together with his brother John, in the ship Planter, in 1635, for America. He was, in 1645, in the 22d year of his age, associated with him as one of the patentees of Flushing, on Long Island, in which town he resided during the remainder of his life. His correspondence, during the years 1642-3, with Gov. Stuyvesant, may be found among the archives at Albany, are ably written, evincing his energy and decision of character, and are evidently the production of a man of superior mind and liberal education. He was the largest landed proprietor at Flushing. He resided upon Lawrence's or Tew's Neck (so called), of which he was the owner, and seemed to have been a gentleman of affluence, his sword, plate and personals alone being valued at £4,430, sterling (see inventory of his estate, on file in the Surrogate's office, city of New York, recorded in 1680, in Liber No. 22, page 24.) He was a magistrate under the Dutch government at Flushing, in 1655, and also held, under the English government, a military commission. He was also in the magistracy of the North Riding of Yorkshire, on Long Island. He was twice married. By his first wife he left issue :

1 William Lawrence, died in 1680, (see Appendix B.) and the following year his widow, Elizabeth, (see Appendix H.) married Sir Philip Carterett, Governor of New Jersey, to which province she removed, and brought up her seven young children by her first husband (see Appendix C). Being a woman of more than ordinary endowments and strength of mind, she was entrusted with the affairs of the colony during the absence of her husband in Europe, and in the title to some of the acts of that period, it is stated that they were ~~“Passed under the administration of Lady Elizabeth Carterett.”~~ Sir Philip founded Elizabethtown, in New Jersey, giving to it her name.

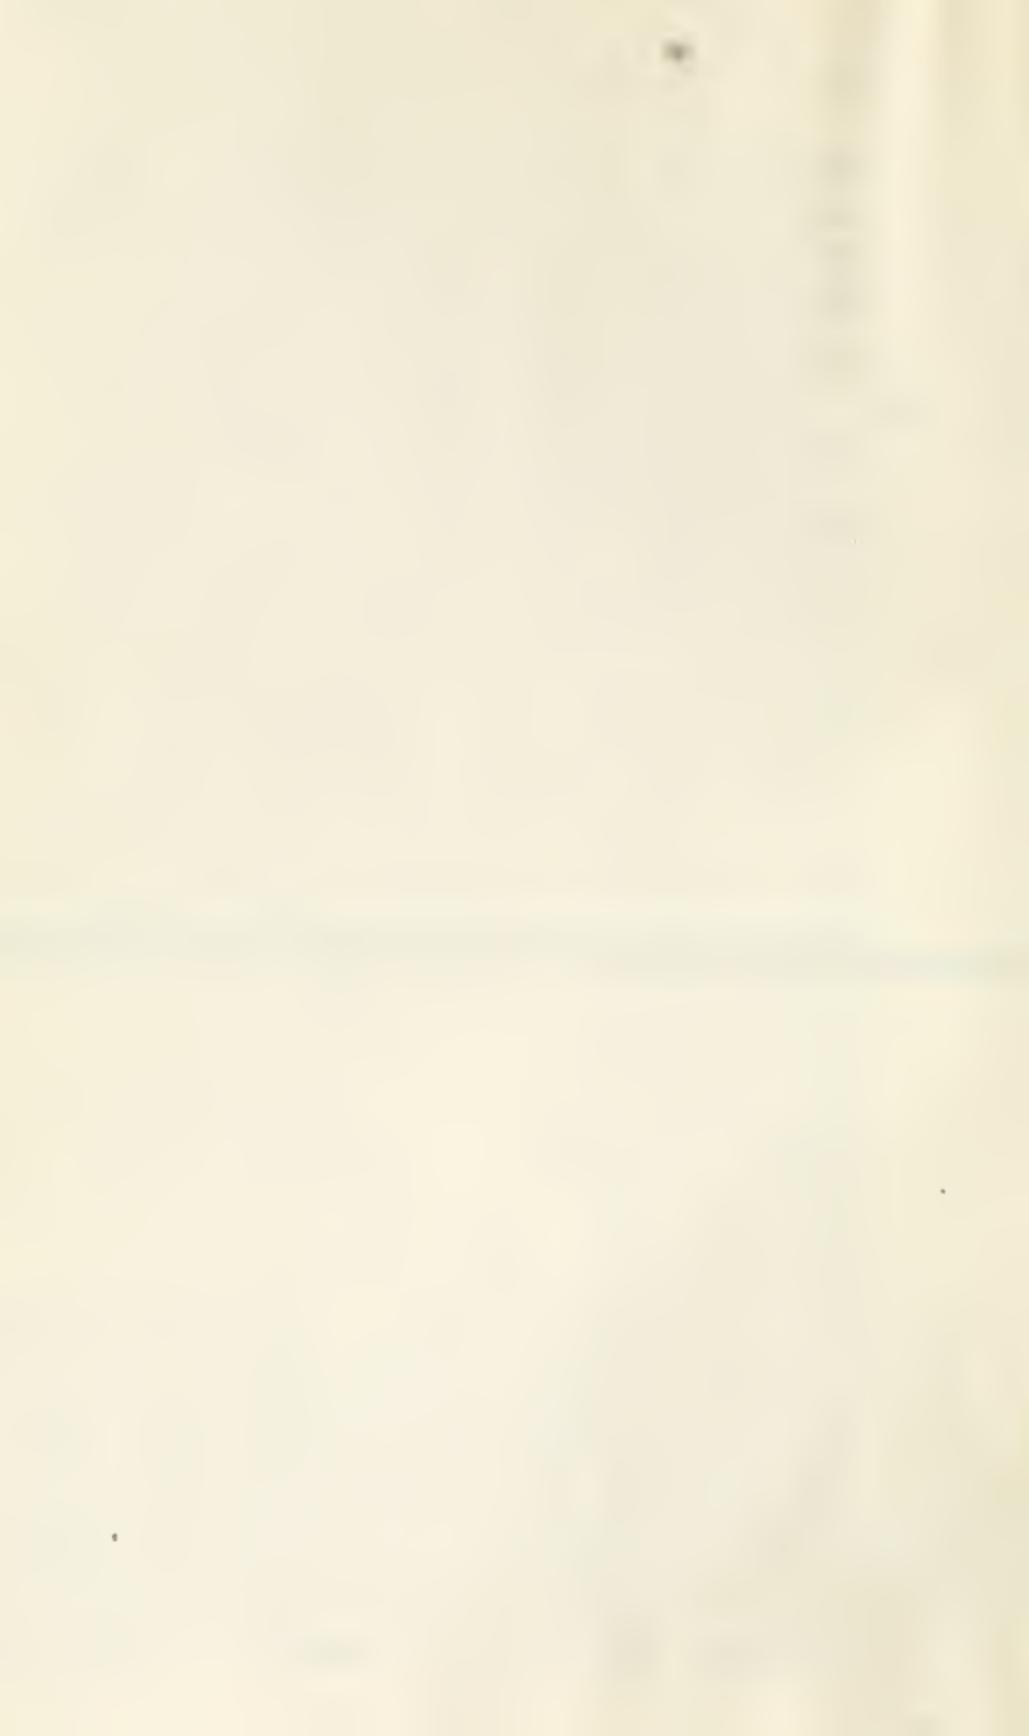

Before her marriage to Sir Philip, she reserved to herself, by an instrument in writing, (see Appendix N.) the right of disposing of the lands conveyed to her by her first husband, William Lawrence, among such of her children by him as she should select ; the one selected by her was her eldest son, Joseph, to whom she conveyed an extensive tract, situated upon Little Neck Bay, in the township of Flushing. Sir Philip died in 1682, leaving the whole of his estate, situate in the Province of East New Jersey, to his widow, Elizabeth, and her heirs forever, appointing the said Elizabeth his sole executrix (see Appendix I. and K). His widow, afterwards, married Col. Richard Townley, (see Appendix L.) the eighth son of Nicholas Townley, of Littleton, about twelve miles from London. The said Col. Richard came over in the suite of Lord Effingham Howard, Governor of Virginia, in the year 1683, and settled in Elizabethtown. Col. Richard was one of the privy council of Deputy Governor Neil Campbell, in 1686.

✓ 2 Joseph Lawrence, eldest son (see Appendix E.) of the first William Lawrence and Elizabeth Smith, his second wife, afterwards Lady Cartarett, married Mary, daughter of Sir Richard Townley, son of Charles Townley, who fell at Marston Moor. At the restoration, he was under the necessity of selling a very valuable estate at Necton, near Leicester, in consequence of losses sustained by sequestration. His daughter, Dorothy, the youngest sister of Mary, married Francis Howard, of Corby, afterwards Baron Howard, of Effingham, and who, on the 8th of December, 1731, was created first Earl of Effingham. He died 1743. The aforesaid Joseph Lawrence was intimate with the above named Lord Effingham, who had married his wife's sister, and who commanded a British frigate, at that time anchored in the offing, opposite his mansion, which he frequently visited. His grandson was named in compliment to this earl (see Holgate's Genealogy of Distinguished Families). He died about 1758. The children of the above named Joseph Lawrence and Mary Townley were

✓ 3 First. RICHARD, born in 1691; married 6th of second month, 1717, Hannah Bowne, (see Appendix Q.) daughter of Samuel Bowne, a minister among the Friends, and was married to Mary Becket, at the meeting-house, at the Falls of the Delaware, August 4th, 1691. She was an English lady, and came over with William Penn, in 1682. He was the son of John Bowne, who, in 1661, erected a dwelling in the eastern part of the village of Flushing. This dwelling is beautifully located in said village, and is still standing in a perfect state of preservation, after the lapse of one hundred and ninety-seven years, being doubtless a very superior building in its day. In this house George Fox was entertained on his visit to Flushing, in 1672, but not being sufficiently large to accommodate all who attended upon his preaching, his hearers assembled under the widely-extended shade of two venerable and majestic oaks near by, one of which is still standing, and can hardly be less than 400 years old; the other was blown down by a violent gale, September 25, 1841. To a stranger this conveys no higher occasion for regret than the removal of a noble tree by the operation of the inevitable laws of nature: but to those who have passed many a happy hour of childhood in gathering the acorns which fell from it, and have made it the scene of their youthful sports, it seems like the removal of a venerated relative—as if one of the few visible links, which in this utilitarian age connect us with the past, was severed.

To the members of the Society of Friends, these trees possessed an historical interest, from the circumstance that beneath them, about the year 1672, the dauntless founder of their sect, with that power and eloquence of truth which drew to his standard Penn and Barclay, and a host of men like them, preached the gospel of redemption to a mixed assemblage, among which might be seen many a son of that swarthy family whose wrongs and sufferings elicit to this day the active efforts of his followers on their behalf. Some eighty years since, these honored trees were threatened with demolition by the owner of the adjacent property, but for the sake of the venerable past were purchased by John Bowne, a lineal descendant of the old worthy of the same name, who listened to the preaching of Fox and embraced his doctrines, for which he was afterwards sent to Holland in irons, by Governor Stuyvesant, where he was honorably liberated by the Dutch government, and a severe reprimand administered to Stuyvesant. And as above stated, the time-honored mansion in which he entertained Fox, and accommodated the regular meetings of the society for many years, is still standing near, and in good repair.

Soon after the event of the gale on the 25th of Sept., 1841, which prostrated to the ground one of the above-named venerable oaks, the following poetical production appeared in the newspapers :

THE FLUSHING OAK.

THE ancient Oak lies prostrate now,
 Its limbs embrace the sod,
 Where, in the Spirit's strength and might
 Our pious fathers trod ;
 Where underneath its spreading arms,
 And by its shadows broad,
 Clad in simplicity and truth,
 They met to worship God.

No stately pillars round them rose,
 No dome was reared on high—
 The Oaks, their only columns were,
 Their roof, the arching sky.
 No organ's deep-toned notes arose,
 Or vocal songs were heard—
 Their music, was the passing wind,
 Or song of forest bird.

And as His Spirit reached their hearts
 By man's lips speaking now,
 A holy fire was in their eye,
 Pure thought upon their brow :

And while in silence deep and still,
Their souls all glowing were
With heartfelt peace and joy and love,
They felt that God was there.

Those free and simple-minded men
Have now all passed away,
And of the scenes in which they moved,
These only relics lay ;
And soon the last surviving oak,
In its majestic pride,
Will gather up its failing limbs,
And wither at its side.

Then guard with care its last remains,
Now that its race is run ;
No sacrilegious hand should touch
The forest's noblest son ;
And when the question may be asked,
Why that old trunk is there—
" 'Tis but the place in olden time, God's holiest altars were."

John Bowne, above named, left England in 1649, and arrived at Boston the same year. His first visit to Flushing, was on the 15th of June, 1651, in company with his brother-in-law, Edward Farrington. He married Hannah, daughter of Robert Field, at Flushing, May 7th, 1656, and in 1661 built the house there, which we have just above noticed, and which has been occupied constantly by some one of his descendants. His wife became intimate with some of the people called Quakers, who at that period, were obliged from necessity, to hold their meetings privately in the woods, and other remote places. She became attached to the society, and was received as a member amongst them. Her husband, mostly from motives of curiosity, attended their meetings, and was so powerfully struck with the beauty and simplicity of their worship, that he invited them to his house, soon after which he also became a member of their society ; “ not merely (as he observes,) from kindness and affection to his wife, but his judgment also was convinced of the principles they held forth ;” for a little time his faith was put to the test, and he had to partake, in a large degree, of the sufferings to which others of his faith and profession were exposed ; and his persecutions, imprisonment, banishment, and severe privations for the truth’s sake, and the testimony of a good conscience, were such as most persons would shrink from, in this our day of ease and quiet enjoyment.

The said John Bowne, had a severe sentence passed against him, on the 14th of Sept., 1662, and the governor finally proceeded to such extremities, that the said Bowne was actually transported to Europe, to be tried for heresy, and his disregard of the orders and placards of the governor and council. He was patiently heard before a committee of the West India Company ; who, finding him a discreet man and steadfast in his religion, set him at liberty—with the following severe reprimand in the form of an epistle, directed to Governor Stuyvesant :

“ AMSTERDAM, April 6, 1663.

“ SIR :—We perceive from your last letter, that you had exiled and transported hither a certain Quaker, named John Bowne. Although it is our anxious desire that similar and other sectarians may not be found among you, yet we doubt extremely the policy of adopting rigorous measures against them. In the youth of your existence, you ought rather to encourage than check the population of the colony.

“ The *conscienc*es of men ought to be free and un- shackled so long as they continue moderate, peaceable, inoffensive, and not hostile to the government. Such have been the maxims of prudence and toleration by which the magistrates of this city (Amsterdam) have been governed; and the consequences have been, that the oppressed and persecuted from every country, have found among us an asylum from distress. Follow in the same steps, and you will be blessed."

Mr. Bowne remained several years abroad, visiting many parts of Europe, and returned to America in the spring of 1665, his wife having died in London in the month of February preceding, and his father, Thomas Bowne, also, during his absence.

He of course found the country in the possession of the English, but calling upon the puissant Stuyvesant, now a private citizen, he expressed his regret for having used so much severity toward him and his fellow Quakers, whom he frankly admitted to be among the most valuable citizens.

The case of Mr. Bowne is only one, among many, on the records of the Quaker persecution; the names of John, Henry and Richard Townsend, are necessarily mentioned in connection with the history of those disgraceful transactions. They were among the first inhabitants of Flushing, Long Island, and owners of land there, as well as patentees of the town.

The intelligence and firmness which they uniformly exhibited, in whatever related to the interest of their fellow citizens, justly endeared them to the people, and gave them a distinction and influence which alarmed the powers of New Amsterdam, who of course, did not view with indifference anything like opposition to their measures. John and Henry were particularly distinguished for their love of religious liberty, and cherished with great veneration the principles of the Quakers.

To these it is well known, the Dutch government, equally with Puritans of Boston and Plymouth, were opposed, and resolute to prevent the spread of such "damnable heresy;" and to crush, in embryo, that "abominable sect called Quakers," the most despotic decrees were passed by the governor and council, making it not only unlawful to countenance the Quakers, but the offenders also liable to fine, scourging, and imprisonment, nay, even ear-cropping, branding upon the forehead, and banishment to the West Indies as slaves.

This odious system of church and state policy, few had the moral courage to resist, but these three brothers Townsend, had sufficient resolution and firmness, not only to disregard, but on many occasions, openly to denounce, as they deserved, the arbitrary edicts of this colonial hierarchy a fit representative of the star chamber.

The position which they occupied among their friends and compeers, only served to enhance the malevolence of those in power, to make them objects of special persecution; and they were accordingly, not only threatened with the displeasure of the government, but subjected also to the most humiliating insult, fine and imprisonment. All which served but to prove the falsity of those principles in religion, that required to be maintained by force, and their inconsistency with that system, which breathes peace on earth and good will to man.

The alternative of exile or incarceration, was alone presented, and duty to themselves and families, led them to elect the former. The three Townsends, therefore, sought and found a temporary asylum at Providence, where they shared the sympathy of those, who like themselves, had been driven by persecution from Boston and Plymouth ; and here among savages experienced a kindness, which even their civilized and Christian brethren of those colonies, denied them.

The brothers, it seems, took up their residence at Warwick, where they were not only treated with much respect, but were honored with offices of trust.

Being largely interested in the purchase of Flushing, and hoping that a different feeling now existed among those in authority, the three Townsends ventured to return with their families to Long Island, in 1656, and were included in the patent obtained that year for Jamaica, where they now took up their residence ; but in a short time began to experience a renewal of the same vindictiveness on the part of government ; and some of their English countrymen, their associates in the purchase, who instead of cherishing them for their virtues, meanly turned spies and informers, and finally drove them from that place.

John and Henry, removed to Oyster Bay, as being out of the Dutch jurisdiction, and Richard retired once more to Rhode Island, in 1658, and established himself at Pawtuxet. In 1667, he joined his brothers John and Henry, at Oyster Bay. Henry became identified with the proprietors of that town in 1661, and in that year received a grant from the inhabitants and proprietors of the town, for land on the stream, called Mill River, on which he afterwards erected a mill, which with the valuable property attached thereto, has remained in his descendants ever since.

Samuel Townsend, fifth eldest son in a direct line from the first John Townsend, removed to the village of Oyster Bay, and purchased and improved the family mansion, which is now standing, and still owned by his descendants.

The depth of the water, and excellence of the harbor, were doubtless the principal inducements with the Sandwich adventurers to plant themselves on its border, and a ketch was built here as early as 1671. Several brigs and smaller vessels, built here by the said Samuel Townsend, were engaged in the European and West India trade, and the place soon rose into commercial importance.

The business was gradually extended and vigorously prosecuted till 1775, when the Revolutionary troubles caused its entire suspension, to the no small sacrifice of those engaged in it.

With the exception of his son Solomon, then in Europe, and his sons Samuel and Robert, merchants of New York, all Mr. Townsend's children were in their minority, and he was only enabled to continue his mercantile business at Oyster Bay to a limited extent. One of his vessels, built at Oyster Bay, a brig, and called the Audrey, after his eldest daughter, was commanded by Effingham Lawrence, who became subsequently an eminent London merchant. The Sarah, another brig, was built for, and commanded by, his eldest son Solomon. Joseph Lawrence, brother of said Effingham, and who married Phebe, daughter of the fourth Henry Townsend, also commanded, at different times, several of Mr. Townsend's vessels.

The above named brothers, Effingham and Joseph, were sons of Richard Lawrence, before mentioned, who also became a member of the Society of Friends, and as hereinbefore mentioned, married Hannah Bowne, and had issue :

When the war of the revolution broke out, he was in command of the ship Glasgow, belonging to the said Thomas Buchanan ; but owing to the (then) recent interruption of trade between the two countries, she was left, by direction of the owner, in London.

Obtaining permission to leave England, Captain Townsend went over to France, and while at Paris, made the acquaintance of his celebrated countryman, Dr. Franklin, to whom he found means of making himself agreeable, and by whom he was introduced at court, and received other tokens of his friendship and regard.

Having consumed sufficient time to see and examine the most remarkable curiosities in the French capital, he made arrangements to return to his own country, and the American commissioner favored him with the following certificate of protection :

“PASSEY, NEAR PARIS, June 27, 1778.

“I certify to whom it may concern, that Captain Solomon Townsend, of New York, mariner, hath this day appeared voluntarily before me, and taken the oath of allegiance to the United States of America, according to the resolution of Congress, thereby acknowledging himself a subject of the United States.

B. FRANKLIN.”

Captain Townsend, was also commissioned by Dr. Franklin, as a volunteer midshipman, in the continental navy, and for this purpose he procured his necessary equipments in Paris. He sailed soon after, in the frigate Providence, for Boston, with Commodore Abraham Whipple.

While on the passage, a suspicious looking craft hove in sight, and preparations were of course forthwith made for an engagement; Captain Townsend being ordered to take charge of a division of guns. No engagement, however, took place, and the vessel reached Boston in November, 1778.

Being unable from the condition of the country, personally to visit his family at Oyster Bay, he traversed the interior of New England, and crossing the River Hudson at Newburg, reached the house of his cousin, Peter Townsend, son of the fourth Henry Townsend, at Chester, Orange County, proprietor of the celebrated iron works and estate of Stirling a few miles off.

Steel was first made by Mr. Townsend, at the Stirling Works, and in the German manner, in 1776. He also made the first anchor ever manufactured in this State, in 1773; and here was constructed in March and April, 1778, the immense chain, extending across the Hudson to prevent the British ships passing West Point. The links of this stupendous chain weighed about 140 lbs. each, and the whole one hundred and sixty tons; made and delivered in the short space of six weeks.

After an absence of seven years, Captain Townsend was enabled by pre-concert to meet some of his family upon Shelter Island, but soon separated under the fearful apprehensions they might never meet again.

Returning to Chester, he was in little time thereafter, united in marriage with his cousin Anne, eldest daughter of the said Peter Townsend, whom, in 1783, he brought with him to Oyster Bay, where the different members of his family were again assembled under the paternal roof.

Like his father, Captain Townsend, he possessed strong intellectual powers, was ardent in all his pursuits, and of indomitable perseverance. He soon after purchased the mountain estate, adjoining that of his father-in-law, which he named Augusta, where he established very extensive iron works, anchory, forges, &c., furnishing thereby ample employment to numerous laborers and artizans, for many years.

He continued, nevertheless, to reside in the city of New York, where he owned and superintended an extensive iron store. He also established a manufactory of bar iron on Peconic River, in Suffolk county, a short distance above the village of Riverhead, which was carried on during his life. To give some idea of the extent of his business at one period, it need only be stated that the losses sustained by him, occasioned by mercantile failures alone, during the general embargo of 1808, exceeded $70,000; yet he relaxed not his exertions, but continued his manufacturing operations in their full extent, till arrested by death, March 27, 1811.

He was chosen frequently to represent the city of New York, in the State Legislature, and was a member of that body at the time of his death.

DESCENDANTS OF THOMAS LAWRENCE.

1 Thomas Lawrence, the youngest of the three brothers who emigrated to America, did not come over till after his two brothers, John and William ; was born about 1625. He, together with these two brothers, in the year 1655, obtained possession of a tract of a land in Newtown, on Long Island, being mentioned as patentees in the patent of that town, granted by Governor Dongan, in 1689.

Thomas subsequently purchased the whole of Hell Gate neck, then consisting of several valuable farms, extending along the East River, from Hell Gate cove to Bowery Bay.

On receiving the news of the Revolution in England, of 1688, and of the removal of Sir Edmund Andros as Governor of Massachusetts, the family of Thomas became decided actors in assisting the principles which had prompted his departure from England. Many persons in Queens, however, as well as Suffolk County, were not disposed to second the popular feeling which had vacated the offices at the city of New York, and placed Leisler at the head of affairs. Not discouraged at the lukewarmness of his neighbors, Thomas Lawrence, though far advanced in years, accepted the command of the forces of Queens County. William, one of his sons, was appointed one of the committee of safety, by whom the government of the colony was for a time assumed, and soon after, one of the council of the province ; an office which he subsequently held from 1702 to 1706, under a commission from Queen Ann.

John Lawrence, another of the sons of Thomas, had the command of the troop of horse of the county assigned to him, with his brother Daniel as cornet. John was soon afterwards appointed high sheriff of the county, to which place he was also chosen in 1698. Among the meagre records which are left of Leisler's times, is the entry of an order to Major Thomas Lawrence, dated 29th of July, 1690, "to press seventy men, horse and foot, as he shall think fit; and horses and provisions; and dispatch them to Southold for the defence and protection of their Majesties' subjects there." The misconception or obstinacy, whichever it was, that influenced Leisler in delaying to surrender the fort at New York to Governor Slaughter on his arrival, involved all the members of his council in the consequences of this omission; and William Lawrence with the rest of them, were seized and committed, on a charge of high treason. John Lawrence, his uncle, who, from the caution of age, or a disapprobation of the violence of some of Leisler's proceedings, had never countenanced his elevation, was appointed on the commission with Sir Thomas Robinson, Col. William Smith, and others, to try those political offenders. These proceedings do not appear, however, to have interrupted the mutual confidence and affection of the uncle and nephew.

The descendants of Thomas Lawrence (being the Newtown branch of the family) are very numerous, residing in Connecticut, New York, New Jersey, and other States of the Union. He died at Newtown, in July, 1703; leaving five sons, to wit:

In the beginning of the war he removed from the City of New York to Ramapo, Rockland County, and afterwards to Rockland Lake, in the same county, and after the establishment of peace, removed to Mount Pleasant, Westchester County, where he remained until he removed to Red Hook, Columbia County, where he died June 16, 1803 ; his only surviving children, all by his first wife, were as follows :

he died May 9, 1848. He established the first drug mill in America, and followed that business for a number of years. The site occupied by the mill was a part of the ground now occupied by the Essex Market, New York City. He served with the New York Volunteers at Harlem Heights, in the last war with Great Britain. 1695, and married December 8th, 1720, Patience, daughter of Joseph Sacket, Esq. He was a wealthy farmer, possessing great perseverance and intelligence, and served in the magistracy of the county for many years. He died May 7th, 1765, leaving — sons and one daughter ; two sons and one daughter having died in his life time.

4 JOHN LAWRENCE, the eldest son of John Lawrence and Patience Sacket, and the great grandson of the first Thomas Lawrence, one of the brothers who first emigrated to America, was born 1721, left Newtown for New York at an early age, and became one of the most eminent merchants of that day. In 1759 he married Catharine, daughter of Hon. Philip Livingston, and sister of Governor William Livingston, of New Jersey. He had no issue by this marriage, and distributed his property among his brothers, after making ample provision for his widow. He died in 1764. The celebrated Whitfield, then in this country, pronounced his funeral sermon. The following obituary notice of the deceased is found in the "New York Gazette, or Weekly Post-Boy," of August 9, 1764 : " On Sunday night, about 11 o'clock, departed this life, after a tedious illness, which he bore with becoming resignation, John Lawrence, Esq., Alderman of the Dock Ward, of this city, which office he filled with equal dignity and steadiness. On Monday his corpse was carried from his house in Dock Street, attended by the different clergy and a numerous train of relations and friends, who sympathised with each other in the loss of so worthy a relation, friend, and acquaintance, to the Presbyterian meeting-house, where, at a short notice, a most excellent discourse was given by Mr. Whitfield, who seemed to be particularly affected himself, a friendship having long subsisted between them." His body was deposited in the family vault of the Right Honorable the Earl of Sterling in the yard of Trinity Church.

4 JOSEPH LAWRENCE, the second son of John Lawrence and Patience Sacket, died at Newtown, 1793, aged 70 ; he married Patience, aunt of the late Bishop Moore, of New York, and was universally respected. His son Richard, who went to Edinburgh to complete his medical education, died after his return, without issue. His sister Ann married Samuel Riker, Esq., who served Queens County in the Assembly in 1784, and was also a representative in Congress several years. He was the father of Hon. Richard Riker, late Recorder of New York, and his brother, John L. Riker, also of June, widow of the late Dr. William James Macneven.

The devotedness of their cause which pervaded the body of whigs, is illustrated by the closing scene of this gentleman. The capture of Cornwallis occurred but a short time before his decease, and while languishing on his sick bed, the news of the capitulation was communicated to him. Assuring him of the truth, he declared his readiness to die now that the ultimate triumph of his country was secured. He left no issue.

4 WILLIAM LAWRENCE, the fifth son of the said John Lawrence and Patience Sacket, was for many years a magistrate of Queens County, and filled the station with usefulness. On the capture of Long Island in 1776, part of his house at Newton was the head-quarters of the British General Robertson, and himself and family were subjected to many of the exactions and vexations which others, who had rebel predelections, experienced from the invaders. He died in his sixty-fifth year; he was twice married, first, Ann Brinckerhoff, and by her had issue :

4 THOMAS LAWRENCE, the sixth son of the said John Lawrence and Patience Sacket, was born in 1743, and died in his 84th year, in 1816. About the age of twenty-five he was appointed to the command of the ship Tartan, of eighteen guns, and made several cruises in her from New York during the old French war. His wife was Elizabeth, daughter of Nathaniel Fish, Esq., of Newtown. Possessed of wealth, he settled on a farm on the shore of Flushing Bay. He was appointed, in 1784, one of the Judges of Queens County, and was distinguished for great decision of character, and by all the punctilious observances which characterize the elevés of the old school. He had a numerous family, most of whom he survived. His son,

5 NATHANIEL, born 1761, entered the North Carolina line of the regular American army as a lieutenant, after he had left Princeton College, and while under age. He was made prisoner by the enemy after behaving with great gallantry. In 1788 he was chosen from Queens County to the Convention which ratified the Constitution of the United States. He also held the office of Attorney General of this State from December 24, 1792, to November 30, 1795, and represented Queens County in Assembly in 1791-2-5 and 6, in which latter year he died, at the age of thirty-five. His wife was Elizabeth, daughter of Judge Berrien, late Attorney General of the United States. His only child, Remsen, sister of the late Peter Remsen, merchant of New York.

5 JANE, died unmarried.

5 WILLIAM, a merchant, died unmarried, at New Orleans.

4 SAMUEL LAWRENCE, the seventh son of the said John Lawrence and Patience Sacket, was a man of great probity and imperturbable courage, united with great goodness of heart. The early loss of his wife and only child, and the confinement and bodily injury which he was subjected to during the possession of Long Island by the British troops, probably tended to increase the peculiarities that remarkably distinguished his character. These political injuries left in him a deep rooted hostility towards the British government, which time had no effect in softening, and none of his prayers were more unfeigned and probably more frequent than those for its overthrow. He died in 1810, at the age of seventy-five, leaving no issue.

4 JONATHAN LAWRENCE, the eighth son of John Lawrence and Patience Sacket, and great grandson of the first Thomas Lawrence, was born at Newtown, October 4, 1737, and early engaged in mercantile pursuits, visiting Europe and the West Indies under the direction, and in the employment of his eldest brother John, an eminent merchant of New York, and connecting himself afterwards in commercial affairs, as a partner of the house of Watson, Murray, and Lawrence. His own gains, the property left him by his said brother John, his portion of the estate of his brother Nathaniel, who died unmarried in the West Indies, and the patrimony derived from his parent, enabled him to retire from business, when about thirty-four years of age. He purchased a residence at Hurlgate, which had belonged to his great grandfather, Thomas Lawrence, (one of the three above named emigrating brothers,) intending to enjoy the ease which his pecuniary circumstances seemed to secure to him. The agitating questions between the mother country and her colonies, soon, however, forbade him to be inactive. In 1774 we find him a leading member of the political committees of Newtown; his efforts and the influence of his brothers and relatives there, contributed to redeem the town from the ill-timed loyalty which distinguished most of the other portions of the country. In 1775 he was appointed a member of the provincial congress that met at New York. In 1776 he was again deputed to that body, and was afterwards elected to the convention of 1776-7, which formed the first constitution of this state. He had previously, in 1772, received the commission of captain in the provincial militia from the royal government; and on the organization of the militia by the provincial congress in 1775, he was appointed major of the brigade, composed of the militia of Queens and Suffolk, of which Nathaniel Woodhull, Esq., was at the same time appointed general. He accompanied that brave officer in the expedition ordered by the convention in 1776, to prevent the supplies of Long Island falling into the hands of the invaders, and was probably saved from participating in the sad fate of his gallant commander, by having been dispatched by him to the convention at Harlem for further orders; and having been thereupon sent by that body to General Washington to endeavor to obtain the additional force that had been promised, from the army at Brooklyn. During the time spent in these military operations, the battle of Long Island had been fought, much of the island had fallen under the controll of the enemy, and stragglers from their ranks had spread over it, in search of booty. All personal communication with his family being cut off, he could only trust to sending a letter secretly to advise them of his situation, and to direct their future course. The convention had adjourned from Harlaem, and sought a place of more safety for their deliberation, at Fishkill. His anxiety for his family was soon relieved by the presence of Mrs. Lawrence and his five children, accompanied by her sister-in-law, the wife of Abraham Riker, Esq., a captain in the American army, who afterwards died in camp, at Valley Forge, in 1778. The house had, at a late hour of the night, been visited by soldiers clamorous for food and plunder. Amusing them with refreshments in the kitchen, the ladies, by the aid of some female servants, conveyed the children (the oldest aged 9 years, and the youngest a little more than one year) from their beds to a boat at the river side, secured a few articles of clothing, and a small chest containing some money, plate and other valuables; and embarking under the guidance of a faithful slave, crossed the river amid the darkness, unmolested, to Great Barn Island, leaving the house and the rest of the property to the mercy of the invaders. At daylight, they obtained a boat on the opposite side of the Island, and in safety reached Harlaem; thus exchanging the plenty and comforts which a short time had blessed their home, for a state of poverty, and a more than seven years' exile.

From this time Mr. Lawrence was the only attending member of the convention, from the county of Queens. On the 9th of May, 1777, he, William Harper, and Matthew Cantine, were appointed commissioners to superintend the manufacture of gun flints, sulphur, lead, and salt; the want of which was severely felt, and which could not then be obtained from abroad. In the course of his duties, he visited the Oneida Indians, procured the holding of a council of their chiefs, made satisfactory experiments on the waters of some of the salt springs, in the western part of the State, and contracted with the Indians for such salt as they might be able to produce. Some veins of excellent lead-ore were also discovered, but not in sufficient quantity to justify the working of them. The supplies afterwards obtained from France and elsewhere superseded the necessity of further efforts on the part of the commissioners.

On the adoption of the state constitution in 1777, and the organization of the government it became impracticable for those parts of the southern district possessed by the enemy, to elect representatives to the legislature, and the convention deemed it their duty to appoint members of assembly for those counties; they also chose LEWIS MORRIS, PIERRE VAN CORTLANDT, JOHN MORIN SCOTT, JONATHAN LAWRENCE, WILLIAM FLOYD, WILLIAM SMITH, ISAAC ROOSEVELT, JOHN JONES, PHILIP LIVINGSTONE, to be senators of the district, till others could be elected in their places, as prescribed by the ordinances of the convention. Mr. Lawrence served under this appointment during the remainder of the war. In 1778 he was appointed a commissioner to execute a law for completing the five continental battalions, raised under the directions of this State, the duties of which office he successfully performed. On the arrival of Count d'Estaing's squadron off Sandy Hook, and in the hope of aiding an enterprise that might hasten the termination of the contest, Mr. Lawrence, with other volunteers, joined the fleet in the expedition against Rhode Island, embarking on the 20th of July from Black Point in New Jersey. He was assigned to the man-of-war L'Hector, of seventy-four guns Captain Mories. The wind was unfavorable; and on their arrival off Newport, much delay ensued from the state of the weather and other circumstances; and it was not till the 6th of August, 1778, that they were enabled to get into the harbor, which was effected under an incessant fire from Brenton's Point, Fort Island, and other places. Most of the troops had been landed on the 9th, when the fleet of Lord Howe, anchoring off the harbor, a re-embarkation was ordered; and the next day, the wind favoring, the French fleet cut their cables and stood out of port, exposed to an increased fire from the forts guarding the passage. Of the two men killed on board the Hector by this fire, one was dashed to pieces by a cannon ball at the side of Mr. Lawrence, who stood so near him as to be covered with his blood and the fragments of his body. Howe also cut his cables and proceeded to sea, and after much retreating on his part and manœuvering for the weather gage, which continued until the 11th, the fleets had been brought into such a position, as to render an engagement apparently inevitable, when a storm ensued, which shattered and dispersed the hostile ships, and induced them respectively to seek repairs in the ports of Boston and New York. In consequence of this result, General Sullivan had to withdraw the American forces from Rhode Island; and Mr. Lawrence, after an absence of about six weeks, reached his residence at Rhinebeck. In October following, he was chosen by the assembly to be the member of the council of appointment from the southern district, being the 2d appointment to that station under the constitution. His term of office expired in October, 1779. In February, 1780, Mr. Lawrence, Isacc Stoutenburg, of New York, and Stephen Ward of Westchester, were appointed commissioners of forfeitures for the southern district of New York, and on the 15th of August, was made one of the commissioners of sequestration for Dutchess county.

On the 15th of June, and on the 9th of October, 1780, acts were passed by the legislature for raising a sum in specie, the better to secure the redemption of the bills of the new emission, then contemplated by the continental congress, whose former emission would command but one-fortieth part in gold or silver, of the nominal amount. Mr. Lawrence was, immediately after the passage of the last-mentioned act, placed at the head of the commission for the southern and middle districts, and John Lansing, Jun., (afterwards Chancellor of the State,) at the head of the commission. In the duties of this office, Mr. Lawrence was actively engaged in 1781. He was again a member of the council of appointment in 1782. In 1783, he opposed, though unsuccessfully, the passage of a bill declaring those described therein, who had adhered to the enemy, to have been aliens from the date of the Declaration of Independence. This bill was clearly in violation of the provisional treaty of peace, and would, if adopted as a law, have produced endless confusion and difficulty on Long Island and elsewhere, beggaring numerous families who had purchased lands bona fide, from persons thus declared to have had no title to them, or who had been prevented, more by their fears than their preferences, from joining the patriotic party. Mr. Lawrence resisted it with great zeal, but his views being opposed by Scott, Schuyler, and others of the ablest members of the Senate, he, Mr. Oothout and Smith, of Suffolk, stood alone on the final passage of the bill. It was carried with still greater unanimity in the assembly. Having passed both houses less than ten days before their adjournment, the council of revision exercised its prerogative of retaining the bill until the first day of the ensuing session in 1784, when a new election for senators and assemblymen having taken place, and men's minds had time to cool, the objections of the council were acquiesced in by the senate, where it had originated, with but one dissenting voice, and the law was consequently rejected.

Peace being concluded in September, 1783, Mr. Lawrence was enabled to visit his long deserted home. He found his land stripped of its timber and fences, his stock and furniture destroyed or removed, and his house, having been occupied by British officers, greatly injured. During his long exile, he had not only exhausted those means which had been saved from the enemy, the gains which he had occasionally been enabled to make during its continuance, and numerous sums owing to him, but had also contracted debts, which the sale of his lands and other resources would little more than repay. Having now at the age of forty-seven, a large family to support and educate, he resolved to recommence business in the city of New York, and endeavor to repair his ruined fortune. Though nearly destitute of pecuniary means, he found himself in good credit; yet his mercantile pursuits were not productive of all the benefit he had anticipated. The lands belonging to the State being offered for sale, he embarked somewhat largely in the purchase of them, and by resale from time to time, not only avoided the bankruptcy which befell other purchasers, but found himself in comfortable circumstances, with a considerable surplus of land unsold. His fortunes gradually improving until the time of his death, he was enabled to distribute a very considerable estate among his family. The result was aided by a well-regulated economy, equally removed from wastefulness and parsimony. Although he declined again to be returned to the legislature, he was not an indifferent spectator of passing events. He took an active part in the reëlection of Governor George Clinton; and when the Constitution had been ratified by the requisite number of States, he was anxious for the concurrence of this State; from which period he acted uniformly with the republican party of the Union. His death occurred in the city of New York, at the age of seventy-five, on the 4th of September, 1812. He was twice married; first, to Judith, daughter of Nathaniel Fish, who died at the age of eighteen years; secondly, to Ruth, daughter of Andrew Riker, of Newtown, who survived him.

4 As the children of MAJOR JONATHAN LAWRENCE (so called by his revolutionary associates,) have filled a considerable space in the political and social institutions of the country, I have deemed it due to the memory of such of them as have passed from amongst us, as well as to the only two survivors of that numerous and intelligent family, to extend their history to the present time.

5 JONATHAN, the eldest and only child of Judith Fish, was born in the city of New York, on the 20th of June, 1767, and died on the 10th of June, 1850, being within ten days of the age of 83 years. After the return of his father and family to this city, and the incorporation of the Bank of New York, he became a clerk in that institution, until after the lapse of a few years, he united with Henry Whitney in the commercial firm of Lawrence & Whitney, which terminated with the death of Mr. Whitney and the political complications with Great Britain which followed his decease.

At the request of his friends, he accepted the office of President of the Merchant's Fire Insurance Company, which he held until the infirmities of age and the urgent desires of his family induced him to resign.

His integrity in matters of business, and the courteousness and popularity of his deportment in private life, led to his nomination and election to the Board of Aldermen of this city, although he seldom was mingled with political circles. His children were :

6 First, HENRY, for many years a merchant at Manila, E. I., where he accumulated an ample fortune, and now in his native city enjoys the fruit of his enterprise in elegant retirement.

6 Second, WILLIAM ANSON, a merchant at Canton, (China,) where he died ; universally respected by his associates before his departure, and especially by a literary society with which he had been connected. His remains, on their arrival from Canton, were interred under a costly monument in Greenwood Cemetery, erected by a resolution of the society, and inscribed an affectionate reminiscence of the qualities of his heart and mind.

6 JONATHAN, a Counsellor-at-Law in this city, was educated in his profession in the office of the late William Slosson, and was afterwards connected with him in his professional engagements until the connection was dissolved by the death of that eminent lawyer. The leisure moments of this young survivor, were devoted to literary pursuits not very congenial (though they were not suffered to interfere) with an industrious discharge of his professional engagements. Many of his poetical essays have found their way to the press amongst the choicest effusions of the American muse ; and (as the author died at the age of 26) have been the cause of much regret that a career so promising in its commencement, should not have been permitted to reach a riper maturity.

6 Third, RICHARD, is now living, an enterprising and successful merchant of New York.

6 Fourth and Fifth, ISABELLA and JUDITH, both died young and unmarried.

6 Sixth, MARGARET, married Barzillai Slosson, son of William Slosson, before-named, and brother of the present Judge Slosson, of the Superior Court. She has for many years been a resident of Geneva, in this State, where her husband, an eloquent and talented lawyer, has held offices of trust and importance under the General and State governments. They have a numerous family of children, some of which are residents of New York city.

6 Seventh, ADRIANA, the youngest of the daughters, married W. T. Whittemore, formerly a merchant in the same city, but now established in Liverpool, England.

The children of Jonathan Lawrence, who died in 1812, by his second wife, Ruth Riker, are as follows :

5 First, JUDITH, born at Hellgate, Newtown, Queens County, June 27, 1769, married John Ireland, by whom she had nine children, four of whom died in their infancy. 6 The survivors—MARGARET, married Thomas Lawrence, a wealthy merchant of this city, who died in 1848, leaving children as follows :

7 HORATIO IRELAND, who married Mary Romaine, daughter of Samuel B. Romaine, who was formerly distinguished in political life, and held the office of Speaker of the Assembly of this State.

7 LOUISA, married Bradish Johnson, a wealthy and deservedly respected resident of New York, and an extensive planter of Louisiana.

7 MARGARET, married W. E. Witmerding, an eminent and wealthy merchant, by whom she had three children, and after her death he continued his affinity to her family by marrying her sister, Eleanor, who is yet living.

7 EDWARD LAWRENCE, married Julia Schuyler, and now resides in the town of Marshall, Michigan.

7 JOHN, married Anne Stanton, of Albany, N. Y., and resides at Islip, L. I.

7 CORNELIA, married George Witmerding, also a resident in Islip, L. I.

7 WILLIAM R., married Mary E. Crandall, he died in 1855, leaving two infant children.

7 FRANCIS COOPER, married Fanny Garner, daughter of Thomas C. Garner, of the city of New York.

JULIA J., married Horace Waldo, Jr., of same city, merchant.

5 JUDITH IRELAND, grand-parent of the above, had other children, as follows: her son, 6 JOHN L., who for many years resided on the western side of Seneca Lake, returned to the city of New York and devoted his time to the care and management of the extensive property belonging to his father, after whose death he was engaged in its subdivision and distribution. He married a daughter of Colonel Nicoll Floyd, of Suffolk County, and grand-daughter of General William Floyd, one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence. Mr. Ireland, yet living, has two children, of whom John, after spending many years in visiting almost every part of the world accessible to travelers, is now a practising lawyer at the New York bar.

6 WILLIAM BUSTEED, son of John and Judith, resides on Washington Square, upon the income of his paternal estate, which by judicious investments has been increased under his management. He married Anne Wait, and has two sons, both of whom are farmers.

6 ANDREW LAWRENCE IRELAND, the youngest son of Judith, was born in 1808, and is still unmarried. After the death of his parents he commenced travelling over Europe, and extended his visits to almost every part of the habitable globe, Europe, Asia, Africa, and part of his own country were the subjects of his toilsome journeys. After several years of exploration through civilized and savage nations, he returned to his native city—has become an active supporter of democratic doctrines—and has retired to a beautiful island in the Scroon Lake, which he has adorned with suitable improvements and appropriate architecture.

His retreat has been visited by eminent Europeans, who have borne testimony through the foreign press, to the beauty of that romantic spot amongst their delineations of American scenery, and to the hospitality of its owner.

6 LOUISA ANNA IRELAND, born 31st of December, 1800, she was three times married, first, to Henry Nicholl, by whom she had three children, Elizabeth Smith, who married Alexander Hamilton, grandson and namesake of General Alexander Hamilton; second, Mary Louisa, who married Major Henry Wayne, of the United States Army, and third Judith, who married William Blair, a captain in the United States Army, each of whom have children. Mr. Nicoll died in 1829, and his widow in 1831, married John Holly Smith, a lieutenant in the United States Army, by whom she had three children, the eldest of which died in infancy; the second, Emeline B., married Dr. James Sellers—since dead—and third, Catharine Floyd, who married Shepherd Knapp, Jr., son of the President of the Mechanic's Bank. Mr. Smith died in 1836, and his widow married Robert Smith in the early part of 1845, and died before the expiration of that year, leaving no issue by her last marriage.

5 MARGARET the second daughter of Jonathan Lawrence and Ruth Riker, born at Hellgate in Newtown, Long Island, January 13, 1771. Died in the City of New York on the 18th of December, 1851, unmarried, aged 81 years.

5 SAMUEL, the first son of Jonathan Lawrence and Ruth Riker, born at Hellgate on the 23d of May, 1773. Died at his residence at Cayuta Lake, in Chemung now Schuyler County, on the 20th of October, 1837, aged 64 years. He was educated a lawyer in the office of his cousin, Nathaniel Lawrence, then Attorney-General of the State, and with him visited various remote parts of the State, at that time scantily settled. He had been in practice but a few years, when he was appointed a Judge of the Marine Court, he was afterwards elected a member of assembly from the City of New York, and during the latter part of his residence was appointed to the combined office of clerk of the city and register. In the year 1814, he in company with his brother Joseph, removed with their families to a patrimonial estate on the margin of Cayuta Lake, where he resided during life. He was there again chosen a representative in assembly, and in 1816 an elector of president and vice-president, and in 1820 a representative of his district in the Congress of the United States. Samuel Lawrence married Elizabeth Ireland, daughter of John Ireland, by his first wife, and had a numerous family of children of which ELIZABETH was married to S. Richardson of this city.

6 JONATHAN, educated a physician, married Mary Richardson who died a very few years after their union, and left one son Samuel, now travelling with his father in Europe.

6 HENRIETTA, married to Isaac Richardson, and died not long after her marriage, leaving a daughter Henrietta yet young.

6 SAMUEL, a member of our State Legislature in 1847, visited California a few years since, and spent considerable time in the mines of Sierra Nevada. Purchased an estate in the vicinity of Marysville, and is now residing at the paternal estate on Cayuta Lake, unmarried. Cornelia Ruth, married Thomson Richardson, who died in 1850 without issue. John and Abraham, both living are yet unmarried, and also Jane Gahn a surviving daughter. Richard, William, Horatio, and Margaret died at a very early age.

5 Fourth, ANDREW, the second son of Jonathan Lawrence and Ruth Riker, was born at Hellgate, in Newtown, Long Island, on the 17th July, 1775, while yet a boy he determined to become a sailor. In the year 1788 or 1789, he studied navigation, and took his first practical lesson in seamanship in the ship Washington, Captain Hodgkinson, a ship distinguished by her expensive equipment for a voyage to Canton in China, being only the second vessel that left the port of New York on so remote an adventure. In the course of a few years by steady and persevering attention to the profession he had adopted, he became a skillful navigator, and at the age of nineteen commanded a ship in the European trade.

After experiencing the vicissitudes in fortune common to an adventurous seafaring life, during a period in which American commerce became a prey to the belligerent navies of England and France, he died in April, 1806, of the African fever, in one of the Dutch factory islands, near an outlet of that river, which has since been discovered to be the ancient Niger.

5 Fifth. RICHARD M. LAWRENCE, third son of Jonathan Lawrence, by Ruth Riker, was born in Rhinebeck, Dutchess county, January 12th, 1778, and died at his residence, in the city of New York, on the 4th of July, 1856, in the 79th year of his age. He was educated a merchant, and first adventured in business at Savannah, in the State of Georgia. He next visited the West Indies and transacted a considerable amount of commission business during the short war between the United States and France. He was next engaged by parties desirous of adventuring in the importation of piece goods from Calcutta. In this trade, as supercargo, he visited the Indies four times, in the last of which he took with him his brother Joseph, as assistant. He afterwards took charge of a valuable shipment to Cadiz, and during the war against the Emperor of France by the combined forces in the Peninsula of Spain and Portugal, conducted under the Duke of Wellington, was a resident and extensive American commission agent in Lisbon. He returned to New York in the early part of 1815, and was soon after chosen successively Vice-President of the National and President of the Union Insurance Company, both of this city; was for many years one of the Governors of the New York Hospital, and an active member of the committees who conducted the affairs of the Insane Asylum. He was for many years a trustee of the Public School Society, and by his assiduity and influence, aided essentially in raising to its present attitude the Manhattan Gaslight Company from the depression into which it had fallen in the infancy of its establishment.

5 ABRAHAM R. LAWRENCE, the 4th son of Jonathan Lawrence and Ruth Riker, was born in New Hackensack, Dutchess county, on the 18th of December, 1780, and was a graduate of Columbia College, in 1797. He was educated a merchant in the store of Lieut. Governor Broome, and at the age of twenty-one united in business with his cousin, John Lawrence, with whom he continued as a partner for nearly ten years. On closing that concern, he took into partnership his youngest brother, William T. Lawrence, who will be entitled to special notice in the sequel. In the year 1807, Mr. Lawrence became deeply interested in the success of the Democratic Republican party, of which Thomas Jefferson was regarded as chief; and as the period was approaching in which a competent successor to that great statesman was to be chosen, a convention of the republican members of both houses of Congress was assembled to determine upon a candidate, and the choice of the majority was James Madison. An alarming opposition was immediately manifested by persons who had other views, and to concentrate the hostile influence under a powerful chief, the old revolutionary governor and veteran general of this State, George Clinton, was announced as Mr. Madison's rival. The introduction into the controversy of so distinguished a candidate, although it was evidently calculated to spread disunion through the ranks of the Democratic party, controlled, nevertheless, the State at large, but was successfully combatted in the city of New York, and by no one more efficiently than the subject of this article. Mr. Madison was elected for two successive terms, and the successful operations of the government under his long career of service evinced the correctness and wisdom of the selection. During the winter of 1812-13, a most important measure was presented to Congress by the importing trade throughout the United States, on application for relief from penalties under the non-importation act. The amount involved was nearly twenty millions of dollars. Committees were deputed to Washington to press upon Congress the desired relief, from the citizens of Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Charleston. After a long struggle, in which the ablest orators of Congress were enlisted, the relief was granted by very small majorities; and the New York committee, consisting of the late John G. Coster, John Mason, Washington Irving and Abraham R. Lawrence, returned with a triumphant report to their constituents. In 1818, an act was passed, establishing the office of appraiser of imported goods, to prevent supposed impositions from being undetected in entries at the custom-house. Two appointments were made for each of the principal cities on the seaboard of the Atlantic, and A. R. Lawrence was one appointed for the port of New York. This office he held for eleven years, and was superseded with the collector, Jonathan Thompson and others, by individuals friendly to the election of General Jackson to the presidency, which Mr. Lawrence and others had opposed.

In 1836, Mr. Lawrence became President of the New York and Harlem Railroad Company, being the successor to the late John Mason. At the time of his election, the road was scarcely passable to Yorkville, and excavations of rock were afterwards made as low down as 14th street. During his administration of the affairs of that Company, the rock excavations were deepened throughout; the spacious tunnel leading to Harlem was perforated and completed; the deep and massive stone causeways, with the bridge over Harlem Creek, were erected, and the road extended and completed from the city hall to Harlem river.

After Mr. Lawrence's resignation of the presidency of that Company, in 1840, the political party to which he was attached, supported him on their ticket for Congress and for elector of President of the United States, in both of which he was unsuccessful; he was, nevertheless, chosen, in 1847, Alderman of the 8th Ward, which previously had favored an opposite political interest. He is yet living at his residence in the city of New York, at an advanced age.

5 JOSEPH LAWRENCE, the 5th son of Jonathan Lawrence and Ruth Riker, was born at Dover, in Dutchess county, May 5th, 1783, and was also educated a merchant in the store of the late John J. Glover ; and on completing his minority, embarked with his brother, Richard, as an assistant supercargo for India. Not long after his return, he was invited to take charge of a very valuable shipment for Calcutta for the same investment in East India piece goods.

On returning to New York, he was married to Mary Sackett, daughter of John and Elizabeth Gibbs Sackett, of Newtown, Long Island.

The difficulties in which our commerce was involved by the contending fleets of France and England, induced him to engage in farming, as a convenient and safe retreat from the hazards of trade. He first turned his attention to a farm, in Westchester county, but finally determined to unite with his brother, Samuel, in settling upon a patrimonial tract of land at Cayuta Lake, in the county of Chemung. His health was impaired by his efforts to subdue and bring into culture the land he had undertaken to improve. He returned, in consequence of his illness, to Newtown, with his family, in the fall of 1816, and after lingering under a wasting disease until the spring of 1817, when attempting to travel across land to his farm, under the care of a brother who attended him on his journey, he became entirely prostrated by labor and exhaustion, and died at Bloomingburg, town of Mamakating, Sullivan county, on the 28th of April, 1817. He left four children—two sons—Andrew and Joseph A. ; the first unmarried, and Joseph, married to Eliza Gorsline, daughter of Peter Gorsline, of Newtown ; also two daughters, Elizabeth-Anna, who married James Moore, and Mary Ruth, who married Doctor Stryker, then resident physician of Newtown, since dead. All the married children of Joseph and Mary Sackett have children now living.

5 JOHN L., the 6th son of Jonathan Lawrence and Ruth Riker, was born in the city of New York on the 2nd of October, 1785. He graduated at Columbia College in the year 1803; studied law in the office of his brother Samuel, and began his professional career in or about the year 1806. Not long after was elected by the directors attorney for the New York branch of the United States Bank.

In 1814 he received the appointment of Secretary of Legation to Sweden, and on the return of the resident Minister, became United States Charge at Stockholm. After accomplishing the purposes of that mission, so far as it fell to his management, he was permitted to return, and on his arrival in New York at the moment selections were to be made of candidates for elective officers for our State, he was nominated and duly elected a member of Assembly for this city. In 1820 he was elected a member of the Convention of 1821, for amending the Constitution of the State, and presided over committees of the whole house with distinguished correctness during the debates on many of the most exciting subjects for discussion. In 1824 he was appointed, on the resignation of Mr. Kip, Assistant Register of the Court of Chancery in this city, and held that office of high trust and confidence under the successive Chancellors, Sanford, Jones and Walworth. In 1840 he was chosen an elector for President and Vice-President of the United States; was afterwards elected a State Senator from the district in which he resided, to serve from 1847 to 1849, and in 1840 was appointed by the Corporation of New York city, Comptroller of the treasury, and died of the prevailing epidemic of that year, on the 24th of July, thus relinquishing with his life two of the most responsible offices of the city and State.

Mr. Lawrence was married, after his return from Sweden, to Sarah Augusta, daughter of General John Smith, of Suffolk county, late a Senator from the State of New York in the Congress of the United States, by whom he had eleven children, all of whom are living excepting Mary, who died quite young in this city, and Richard, who died at Manilla, in the East Indies.

6 The eldest son, JOHN SMITH, is in full practice as Counsellor-at-Law at the New York bar.

6 ELIZABETH, the eldest daughter, married Alfred H. Lawrence of New York city.

6 MARGARET, married J. W. Walsh, of Brooklyn.

6 ANNE MIDDLETON, married John Suydam, and resides at Saville, on Long Island.

6 WILLIAM THOMAS, married Sophy Tilley, and resides in the city of New York.

6 SARAH A., unmarried, and the youngest daughter,

6 LYDIA SMITH, are both residing with their mother in the same city.

6 CHARLES WILLIAM holds an office in the Street Department of the city of New York, under the Common Council.

6 ABRAHAM R., is assistant-counsel for the Corporation.

5 WILLIAM T. LAWRENCE, the 7th son of Jonathan Lawrence and Ruth Riker, was born in New York city May 7, 1788. At an early age he entered the store of his brother, Abraham R. Lawrence, and became a correct accountant and a well-informed merchant. On reaching a competent age he united with the same brother as a partner. In the year 1825, he married Margaret Sophia Muller, the daughter of Remburtus F.

Muller, originally of Amsterdam, in Holland, who had in early life visited the island of St. Martins, a dependency of Holland ; was long a resident there, and during the first French revolution, became governor of that colony.

Mr. Muller, before his removal to New York, married Catherine Gibbes, daughter of John S. Gibbes, who, by appointment of the government at home, had preceded Mr. Muller in the government of the island of St. Martins ; and in regard to this family of Gibbes, it may be incidentally stated that the kindred connections of Gibbes, Storkyis and Herliger, held severally, by the same appointment of the Dutch government, the office of governor of St. Martins during successive generations. Mr. Lawrence, after his marriage, removed to that part of the patrimonial land which had fallen to his share, on the eastern side of the Cayuta Lake. He there made expensive and valuable improvements, and being possessed of practical and sound understanding and a liberal heart, he soon became a political adviser amongst his neighbors, and a favorite throughout his district. In the year 1839 he was appointed judge of the county of Tompkins, and in 1847, was nominated for a member of Congress in the district composed of the counties of Tompkins, Chemung and Yates, and was elected to that office, although on previous elections that district had given large majorities in favor of the adverse party. This gentleman is yet living, and has lost nothing of the respect and confidence of those whose attachment to him had thus far ministered to his political and judicial elevation.

4 COL. DANIEL LAWRENCE, the 9th son of John Lawrence and Patience Sacket, was, like his brother Jonathan, an exile from his home from 1776 to 1783, and served as a member of Assembly from Queens, under the ordinance of the Convention of 1777, and from that year till the termination of the war. He married Miss Eve Van Horn of New York, a lady of a highly respectable family in the city of New York, and died, leaving numerous descendants, in 1807, at the age of sixty-eight years. LAWRENCE AND TOWNLEY CONNECTION.

Extracted from the documents of Lewis P. Hunt, on his return from England in November, 1857, which is the most reliable information that has yet been made public in relation to the above named families.

The Townley Estate is of many millions, and situated in Lancashire.

The Lawrence Estate is in Chancery.

The two families of Lawrence and Townley are connected by the marriage of Joseph Lawrence with Mary Townley, daughter of Sir Richard Townley, of England, who was possessed of considerable Estate in Lancashire.

The foundation of this family of the Townley, is this :

Richard Townley, Esq., the ancestor of Townley of Lancaster, born in 1628, married Margaret Paston, daughter of Clemant Paston, Esq., of Barnington, in Norfolk, and had thirteen children, to wit :

First, Clemant, second, Richard, both died young ; third, Charles, heir to his father ; fourth, John, died in infancy ; fifth, John, a monk ; sixth, Richard, born in 1664 ; seventh, Thomas, born in 1668 ; eighth Mary, married Joseph Lawrence ; ninth, Anne ; tenth, Dorothy, married to Francis Howard, Esq., of Corby, in Cumberland, afterwards Lord Effingham ; eleventh, Frances, married to Cuthbert Kennet, Esq., of Coxhow ; twelfth, Margaret, and thirteenth, Cicely, both nuns, and died at Fasser St. Victoir, in Paris.

William Townley, Esq., of Townley, grandson and successor to the above Richard, was married to the only daughter and sole heir of Ralph Standish, Esq., of Standish, by Lady Philippa Howard, daughter of Henry

Howard, sixth Duke of Norfolk ; and are consequently connected :

The Lawrence Estate and Townley ;

The Townley Estate and Standish ;

And the Lawrence Estate.

Not one of those three estates has been settled yet ; so upon proving the relationship to one of those three families, Lawrence, Townley, and Standish, this relation would by possibility be entitled to those three estates.

Examination in the special Lawrence case or cases in America.

The parties in America are producing a certificate of marriage of Richard Lawrence, son of Joseph Lawrence, with Hannah Bowne.

Those two names John, and Joseph, keep in the family, and found in the Lawrence pedigree of England. First reason to believe that there is a connection between these two families.

The date of the marriage and the birth are also perfectly corresponding.

This Richard, the son of Joseph, was married in 1717, he must be supposed to be born about from 1680, to 1690.

The brothers formerly said to have gone to America about 1635. This Joseph, was son, no doubt to one of those two brothers.

We must conclude from those premises and facts, that the pedigree from America, as descending from William Lawrence and Elizabeth Smith, as being the father and mother of Joseph Lawrence and Mary Townley, who have great chance of success.

The great point in that matter should be to identify the first ancestor, William Lawrence, to the second ancestor, Joseph Lawrence, as being connected with this American Lawrence family, as originally coming from England.

One strong opinion is, that the pedigree in the Lawrence case, of the Lawrence and Townley and Hunt, has the greater chance of success.

In corroboration of this present statement and conclusion, it should appear useful, and indeed indispensable, to examine separately first, and after comparatively, with the American pedigree, all the other pedigrees of the Lawrence families in England, either produced into court, or communicated between the solicitors of the case.

There are about twenty-five pedigrees produced, and all the pedigrees produced before the court till the present time have failed, or could not be proved in any way.

And all the pedigrees being in the hands of the Solicitors, or known in the case, could not establish any solid claim.

It has been stated in the various debates, that the three brothers died, leaving no children in England.

This capital point proves that in order to trace out the Lawrence pedigree, it may be only by the descendants, that is to say, the ancestors.

The documents of the said Lewis P. Hunt, states that there is therein enumerated the various sources and records, were it not only possible, but quite sure, to find the necessary evidence.

We beg most respectfully to submit the following form of identity to the Lawrence and Townley families, for the benefit of all families interested :

In the first place, to identify the first ancestor, William Lawrence, with the second ancestor, Joseph Lawrence, we produce the certificate of license for the marriage of Mr. William Lawrence and Elizabeth Smith, and letters of administration granted to Elizabeth Lawrence, the widow of William Lawrence deceased, together with a conveyance of the said Elizabeth Lawrence in execution of her trust, as also a certificate of guardianship of her seven children, (see appendix, A. B. and C.)

We claim this to be the strongest proof of the identity of Elizabeth Lawrence, alias Carterett, alias Townley, as the lawful wife of William Lawrence first above named.

Secondly. By quit claim deed, made by Joseph Lawrence of Flushing, to Joseph Bonny of Woodbridge, in the province of East New Jersey, in the year 1735, as identifying the second ancestor, Joseph Lawrence, with the said Elizabeth Lawrence above identified as the lawful wife of the first ancestor, William Lawrence, who came over from England to America as aforesaid (see Appendix D).

Thirdly. We further offer a certificate of marriage of Richard Lawrence, eldest son of Joseph Lawrence, with Hannah Bowne, daughter of Samuel Bowne and Mary Becket, as also Joseph Lawrence's will, to prove the identity of the third ancestor, Richard Lawrence, with the second ancestor, Joseph Lawrence (see Appendix E. and F).

Fourthly, We offer a certificate of marriage of Stephanas Hunt with Lydia Lawrence, daughter of Richard Lawrence, together with Richard Lawrence's will, to identify the fourth ancestor, Stephanas Hunt, with the third ancestor, Richard Lawrence (see Appendix R. and G).

Fifthly. By a deed of Josiah Hunt and Elizabeth his wife, with two attesting witnesses (as the marriage certificate is destroyed), as also Stephanas Hunt's will, as identifying the fifth ancestor, Josiah Hunt, with the fourth ancestor, Stephanas Hunt (see appendix M).

This completes the identity of the first ancestor, William Lawrence, with the fifth ancestor, Josiah Hunt.

All the above parties we claim to be established by first class testimony, and the strongest known to the Federal Law, except the marriage of Joseph Lawrence with Mary Townley, and of that we have a traditionary account from our forefathers, together with Holgate's Genealogy of distinguished families, and letters from H. G. Summerby, Esq., of London, and the Honorable Ex-Governor William Beach Lawrence of Newport, Rhode Island, to Mr. Thomas Lawrence of Providence, Rhode Island. In corroboration of the statements made in said letter, as also Holgate's Genealogy herein-before mentioned, we beg to offer and claim as corroborating testimony, the signature of Joseph Lawrence and Mary his wife, in their own proper hand-writing, subscribed to the certificate of marriage of their eldest son Richard Lawrence with Hannah Bowne, as witnesses thereto (see appendix Q).

The two above named estates, Townley and Standish, descends to the Lawrence family, by intermarriage in the following manner, to wit: Cecilia, daughter of Ralph Standish, Esq., and Philippa Howard, became before her death, the sole heiress of her grandfather, Henry Howard, sixth Duke of Norfolk. The said Cecilia Standish married Sir William Townley; by said marriage the property became vested in the Townley family; and, by defect of heirs, descends to Mary Townley, who married Joseph Lawrence.

LONDON, 41 Upper Charlotte Street,
Fitzroy Square, April 9, 1852.

DEAR SIR :—In your letter, just received, you say you want something definite as to whether your John Lawrence, the husband of Mary Townley, is actually the person to whose descendants a portion of the Townley estate belongs.

This investigation would be attended with time and expense, as the preliminary information you require can only be obtained by searching records, and perhaps making a special journey into that part of England where Mary Townley was born.

I am surprised that the American claimants have not before now caused this matter to be thoroughly inquired into. It is a well-known fact that there are such estates as you mention, and that the right heir has not yet made his appearance, but whether that person is to be found on this or the other side of the Atlantic remains to be proved.

I think you are mistaken about who Mary Townley married. John Lawrence, who settled at Long Island, was but 17 years of age when he went to America. His wife was Susannah. His brother William, who accompanied him, was but 12, and it was his son who married Mary Townley, an English lady of birth and fortune, and it is not unlikely that her descendants are entitled to property in this country; but I have no time to investigate it as a matter of speculation. My literary enquiries into the family histories of the first settlers of New England, take me to all parts of Great Britain, and I am perfectly familiar with all the records likely to contain the information you require; but it cannot be supposed that I could attend to your kind of investigation at my own expense.

I will add, that the family of the Hon. Abbot Lawrence is in no way connected with John Lawrence who sailed from Gravesend for New England, in 1635, and settled at Long Island.

I remain, very truly,

Your ob't serv't,

H. G. SUMERBY.

“My Dear Lott,—I received with much satisfaction your letter of 4 M^o 22, but have not seen your friend Thomas Walker to whom you refer me, and wish me to write by his return. I observe the change a few years has made in your family, and among my relations and friends around you; it is what we should be prepared to meet, and must ourselves experience in our turn, and let us endeavor to merit a happy change whenever the Great Disposer of Events is pleased to order it.

“I am pleased to hear you are on the paternal Farm, and sincerely wish you every sort of happiness that is good for you; and please to present me to your Brothers and Sisters and to every branch of the family, with all good wishes for a long continuance of peace and plenty, Liberty and happiness.

“I should be glad to spend the Evening of my days in my native land, but am too much engaged in business of other people, my own and the publicks to think of leaving it. My Eldest son is my partner in business and a great relief to me, and I have one son settled at Bengal, one a sailor in the Eastindia Service, and one at school finishing his Education, near 14 years old, and one Daughter, all promises fair to be useful members of the society Providence may please to place them among. I do not recollect ever receiving the Apples you mention to have sent me, tho’ I am Equally obliged to you. A Barrel of your fine Winter Pippins is a most welcome thing to us, we have no such Apples in England. Your Kiskatama nuts and Chesnuts are also very acceptable here, and I shall be much pleased to make you some return if I know how, or what you are deficient in, principally to promote a correspondence with you and my relations from whom I seldom hear, tho’ I can assure you and them my affections for you is not the less for being placed by the Great Disposer of Events at a distance from you in this life.

INTRODUCTION.

IN a Centennial Festival held at Canaan, Litchfield County, Connecticut, on the 7th November, 1851, by the descendants of ISAAC LAWRENCE, whose old house, built by him in that town one hundred years previously, remained a venerable relic of its first inmate—Frederic S. Pease, of Albany, and Mr. Isaac Lawrence, of New York, were appointed to prepare a genealogy of the Ancestry and Posterity of the old patriarch, who was born in Groton, Massachusetts, in 1705, was taken by his parents when a child to Plainfield, Connecticut, and in the latter part of May, 1738, being then married and having children, he migrated with his family through a trackless wilderness, and on the 2d of the following month of June, reached the position (now the flourishing village of Canaan), where he spent the remainder of his life, expiring on the 2d of December, 1793, aged 88. His posterity were numerous, and are now spread over various States of this Union, and possessing the enterprise and energy which from the earliest times have been exhibited by the individuals of that name, both before and after their migration to this country. The uniform hostility to constraint in conscientious dogmas, and their united repugnance to religious as well as political control beyond the limits of reasonable and well devised authority, all convince me that before the embarkation of their ancestors, and while those ancestors were yet the subjects of a tyrannical Prince, or in order to free themselves from oppression, had fled to Holland for protection. They all evinced the same attachment to liberty of opinion, as if educated in the same school. It is therefore my conclusion, that the Lawrences of Watertown, and those of Ipswich and of New Amsterdam, were of a kindred ancestry. But supposing I am not permitted to doubt that the ancestral part of Isaac Lawrence's genealogy has been laboriously and authentically detailed in Pease and Lawrence's publication, it is evident their family is a distinct branch from our own.

Their original John Lawrence, had first a wife named Elizabeth, by whom he had thirteen children, all born at Watertown—the last child, Zachariah, born in 1658. In 1660, he removed from Watertown to Groton, where he again married and had children, and died there on the 11th July, 1667. Our John Lawrence does not appear to have ever resided in either Watertown or Groton. He landed at Plymouth, removed soon after to Ipswich, and thence again removed to Long Island; and in 1644, under a grant from Governor Keift, became one of the patentees of the town of Hempstead, and in 1645, a patentee of Flushing. He removed from Long Island, in 1658, to New Amsterdam (now New York), and between that period and 1699, when he died, he held offices under the Dutch and British governments, of such high trust and importance as to place his name and long life upon record in the most interesting annals of our city and State. This and many other discrepancies in the genealogical history of the Groton and Long Island Lawrences, forbid me to claim them as part of our family until our affinities are more satisfactorily explored. Nevertheless, it is desirable that this compilation should be made more comprehensive by inserting the memoir compiled by Messrs. Pease and Lawrence, that succeeding generations of either branch may gratify their pride or curiosity by the facility this will afford them to trace their origin ; and I may also say, that my desire to add this memoir to my own, is duly enhanced by a fact not less flattering than prominent, that many eminent incumbents of high office in the legislative, judicial, and executive departments, in various States of this Union, and in the diplomatic agencies of the government, distinguished for their intelligence and usefulness as public men, and for their elevated charities in social life, claim descent from the Lawrence's of Watertown. By their enterprise, cities have grown up as if by the wand of the magician ; expiring labor has been resuscitated and made active ; seminaries of learning, nurtured by their wealth, have spread an influence over the ocean and the land, wherever genius and civilization invited their interposition. I cannot, therefore (nor would I willingly do it if I could), exclude from an eminent original of what to my partial mind is all that is good, self-denying, and patriotic, a collateral and, as I believe, a consanguineous race of relatives, alike ennobled as our own by all that has given efficiency and energy to human progress. I do not here attempt to extend the details of this genealogy to more recent times than this memoir extends to ; leaving it to the families interested to carry out the inquiry. But in this volume I have taken care to append to the memoir a sufficiency of blank leaves, upon which individuals who take an interest in it may insert additional information.

GENEALOGY

ANCESTRY AND POSTERITY

OF

Isaac Lawrence,

AND

CENTENNIAL MEETING OF HIS DESCENDANTS,

November 27, 1851.

P R E F A C E .

THE name of Lawrence is traceable to very high antiquity. It has been variously spelt. Laurentius is the form in which it was found as first given to men.

The first instance of an individual to whom the name belonged who lived in England, which has been ascertained, is that of Lawrence, a monk ; by birth a Roman, he came over from Italy to Britain in company with Austin and others who labored for the propagation of Christianity in the island. Upon the death of Austin, Lawrence, according to previous arrangement, was appointed to succeed him as Archbishop of the See of Canterbury. He was buried in the Monastery of St. Austins, A.D. 916.

It is, however, to one Robert Lawrence, of Lancashire, we are to look for the first individual who is entitled to be considered the ancestor of the Lawrences of England, and consequently of this country. Born, probably, as early as A.D. 1150, he accompanied Richard Cœur de Lion to the war of the Crusades, in the Holy Land, and so distinguished himself in the siege of Acre that he was knighted Sir Robert of Ashton Hall, and obtained for his arms "Argent, a cross raguly gules," A.D. 1191.

GENEALOGY.

John Lawrence, of Watertown, Massachusetts, is supposed to have come to this country early in 1635. It is probable that he came in the ship Planter, bound for New England, having received a certificate from the minister of Great St. Albans, Hertfordshire. He may, therefore, be regarded as a native of St. Albans, born in 1617-18, but by what parents is not known. The name of his wife was Elizabeth, by whom he had thirteen children, born at Watertown. About 1660, he removed with his family to Groton, Mass., where his wife Elizabeth died, 29th August, 1663. His second wife, whom he married 2d November, 1664, was Susanna Batchelder, daughter of William Batchelder, of Charleston, by whom he had two daughters. He died at Groton, 11th July, 1667; the widow, Susanna Lawrence, died 8th July, 1668.

Enoch Lawrence, (⁶) married March 6th, 1676-7, Ruth, widow of John Shattuck ; her maiden name was Ruth Whitney. Her husband was drowned in crossing Charleston ferry, September 14th, 1675. He died 28th September, 1744, leaving children :

- I. NATHANIEL, born Feb. 21, 1678.
 II. DANIEL, b. March 7th, 1681, d. about 1778.
 III. ZECHARIAH, b. 16-5 mo. 1683.
 IV. JEREMIAH, b. May 1st, 1686.

Daniel Lawrence, (²) married Sarah ——. It is supposed that at the time of his death he was with a son John, who has since died in Norfolk, Connecticut. His son Isaac gave the use of a farm to his half brother John, as compensation for taking care of their father. He was buried in the lower burying ground of North Canaan. His children were, by first wife, Daniel and Isaac and several daughters.

DANIEL, born April 22d, 1702. His children were :

1 Nathaniel, who had by his first wife, Sarah, Martha and Anson. By his second, Elizabeth, Silas, Keziah, Nathaniel and Phebe, who was the second wife of Josiah Lawrence. 2 Gideon, 3 Stephen, 4 Rufus, 5 Sarah, 6 Sybil, 7 Lois, 8 Esther. He was grandfather of the late Mr. Isaac Fellows, on the maternal side. He built and kept a tavern in the house in which John Wadsworth lived and died, and which was taken down a few years since, on the north side of the road, a short distance east of Konkapot river. From this house he removed to Sheffield, where he died.

By his second wife he had JOHN (Major John), at whose house he died, and JEREMIAH, who was three times married. By his first wife, who was Olive Wheeler, he had David, Jonathan and Nehemiah. By the second, who was Betsey Smith, sister of Willard and Obadiah Smith, he had Jabez, who removed to Rhode Island. By the third, who was the widow Higby, a sister of the late Captain Uziel Clark's father, he had Putnam and William. David, by the first wife had a son Nathan, who had children: George, Lewis Leonard, Lucy and Wealthy. Mrs. Samuel Rood, living in Canaan in 1851 was also a daughter of David. Jonathan, by first wife, had a son Joseph, who had children: John, Benjamin and Betsey Ann. Nehemiah, by first wife, had children: a son Villa, a daughter who married Alpha Sage of Colebrook, Ct., Betsey, who was wife of Phineas Pease of Stockbridge, Mass., married 25th November, 1799. Nehemiah lived in a red house on the north side of the road, a few rods west of, opposite to, where William Peet has long lived, about half a mile east of Konkapot river.

Putnam, by the third wife, died in the year ——. His children were: Thankful, who married Daniel White, William C., Mary Ann, who married John Watson, Adaline, who married ——— Lewis, Caroline, Nancy and Henry, who married Abigail Doolittle.

Jeremiah Lawrence built, and for a time lived in, the house where Andrew Stevens, senior, lived and died, on the south side of the road, about a quarter of a mile east of Konkapot river. Mr. Jonathan Gillett, an aged man in Canaan, says that he died in what was known as the Robert Baker house. He also distinctly remembers hearing it said that, when he was in his last moments, Captain Isaac Lawrence ordered all his men to leave their work that day, for his brother Jeremiah was dying. William Lawrence says that Jeremiah was his grandfather's half-brother, as he had but one full brother, which was Daniel, junior.

Daniel Lawrence, senior, is said to have had by his two wives, twenty-two children.

Capt. Isaac Lawrence,

who has generally, on account of his prominence in society, been regarded as the head of this branch of the family, was born in Groton, Mass., 25th February, 1704-5, according to the public records of that town. It is supposed that with his parents, when a child, he removed to Plainfield, Ct., where it is presumed he remained until his removal to Canaan, Ct. In the absence of all direct proof, by public record or otherwise, that the family of which he was a member, removed from Groton to Plainfield, the following statement from the records of Groton, according to Butler's History, must be relied on. Groton was a frontier town, and much exposed to Indian depredations. The suffering was so extreme, that many became discouraged and removed from the town. Several families went to Plainfield, Ct., and others "contemplated" going to the same place. Among the latter were Daniel Lawrence, Joseph Lawrence uncle of Daniel, and Zachariah Lawrence who was uncle or brother of Daniel. This took place in 1707, while Daniel, Jun., and Isaac, sons of Daniel, were young children. No record of these families can be found in Groton since this event. The part of Plainfield to which they removed, or came from, has since been formed into a new town and named Killingly. In the spring of 1738, with a team composed of a yoke of oxen and a horse, he started with his family and goods in a cart for his new home, in what was then called the new and western country. East of New Hartford it was partially settled; but in the remaining distance there was not a house, and the most of the way it was a heavily wooded forest through which he was obliged to cut his road, and bridge the streams too deep to ford. The distance by the route which he took, through the northwest part of Norfolk, and near the corner of New Marlborough, was 30 miles or more, and the time occupied in making the journey from New Hartford to his destination, was nine days. Some say fourteen.

On one of the nights of their journey through the forest, although it was late in May, there was a fall of snow. In the morning when they awoke the track of a bear was discovered in the snow near the cart, at which the children manifested surprise that they had not been eaten. The father improved the circumstance by directing their thoughts to their Heavenly Father as their protector. He reached his destination on the second day of June, 1738, and encamped under an oak tree, sleeping in their cart, eighty rods south west of the tavern house which he had subsequently built, and near where the saw mill now stands.

Soon afterwards he dug a hole in the side of a hill, and, with some crotches, poles and boards, made a temporary shelter, half under ground, in which they lived till the next spring, when he erected a house on the lot opposite the saw mill. Remains of the old chimney are found now, when the field is plowed. A few years afterwards he built on the lot which is now (1851) an orchard, sixty rods northwest of the tavern house, and in 1751, he built the house which has long been known as the Lawrence tavern, which he occupied until about 1786, most of the time for this purpose. At this period he was compelled to relinquish active business, being about eighty years old, on account of a disease in his limbs. His son Jonas and family then took the occupancy of the house, having the care of him until his death, which was on the 2d December, 1793.

Some of his descendants now living remember him well, as do many other residents of the town. From their personal knowledge of him, and from traditionary accounts through them, we gather the following information with reference to his personal appearance, character and general course of life. His stature was about six feet, large frame, not fleshy, erect, pleasant countenance, sociable, intelligent, excellent character, and active and correct business habits. By occupation a farmer, but had a good deal of mechanical ingenuity, and used to do some work for himself and neighbors as a carpenter and joiner. He is said to have superintended the erection of the first meeting house in Canaan. He accumulated a valuable property, owned several large farms which he kept under cultivation, was the owner of twenty slaves at one time, to whom he gave their freedom before his death, with the exception of one who was made so by his heirs, making provision for the aged and infirm, and contributing to the comfort of others who were needy.

When Lord Gordon and the Earl of Morris passed through the colonies to ascertain their resources and ability to bear taxation, they put up at Capt. Isaac's house. He was then owner of twenty slaves. His lordship expressing surprise at their apparently good condition, asked them if they always fared so well. London was the spokesman, and replied: "Yes, massa; we have vittle enough, clo enough, and work enough." Some living remember happy old Lon, as he was called, and Phillis, whose house was on this farm in a corner of the lot near where the railway station now is.

These facts show that he was a man of great industry and perseverance, and that he made life worth something to himself and others. He held many town offices, and was a representative to the General Assembly of the State for one session, in 1765. His extensive business transactions necessarily bringing him in contact with a great number of persons, his excellent reputation, and the veneration in which he was held, afford the best evidence we could have, that his general course was honorable, manly and benevolent.

He was a member of the first Congregational Church which was organized in this town, in that part which is now called South Canaan; and it appears from the records of the church (the second Congregational) in this society, that himself, wife, and others, agreeably to their own request were, on the 1st December, 1769, dismissed from it, and recommended to be formed in church fellowship as the second Congregational society in what is now known as North Canaan.

The frequency with which his name appears in the business meetings of this church, and from information derived from other sources, afford good reasons for believing that he was an exemplary Christian.

He was twice married. His first wife was Lydia Hewitt, married, as it is supposed, in Plainfield. She died 14th November, 1767, aged 60. The second was widow Amy Whitney, who lived twenty-six years after his death, which occurred 2d December, 1793.

He had seven sons and four daughters, all by his first wife.

I. Jonas his first child was born 1728, and died 22d May, 1793. He married Sept. 3d, 1754, Tryphena Lawrence of Littleton, born 26th Sept. 1735, daughter of Jonathan Lawrence and Tryphena Powers, who died at West Stockbridge, Mass., 31st January, 1795.

Their children were :

1. Lydia.

2. William Solomon. He died 1797. Married Esther Dutton, 12th Oct. 1780. Had children :

SOPHIA, who married Russell Fowler, and had four sons : Sevellan, Roger, Hiram and Russell ; and three daughters : Samantha, Sophia, Mary Ellen and Adaline Metesia.

BETSEY, who married Austin Fowler, and had four sons and three daughters : Franklin Dutton, Jordan Nickle, William Washington, and Cyrus Elijah ; Eliza Emeline, Adelia Experience and Amanda Maria.

ORANGE, who married Sarah House, about 1820, and had three sons and five daughters: Cyrus, Ferris, Orange; Mary, Esther, Frances, Rhoda, and Sarah. He resides at Orangeville, Canada West.

3. Abiah, born 30th Nov. 1760; married Stephen Brown, of West Stockbridge, Mass. Their children were: Hannah, who married a Southwick. She had eight children, who are all dead but one. The names of only two of them have been ascertained: Lucius, who lives at Mount Morris, N. Y., and Stephen. She afterwards joined the Shakers, and in 1848 resided at Geneseo, N. Y.

Like all the daughters of Jonas, she was very fair. One day as she was sitting at an open window, a stranger traveling on horseback towards the west came along, and passing the house he saw the damsel, and was so attracted by her beauty that he alighted and went in and called for something, with the hope of an interview. He first met her mother, who being engaged about her domestic affairs, called her by her name, Tryphena. She came and served the stranger. Smitten by her charms, he determined to woo her ; and remounting his horse, he went on his way. Immediately on reaching his home he addressed a letter to Tryphena Burrall, guessing the surname, there being families of that name in the town, which reached the town but remained unopened, because no person of that designation was known. Another and another came, but no response was returned, until after due deliberation it was concluded that they must have been intended for Tryphena Lawrence, when an answer was returned, declining of course, a compliance with his wishes. But further correspondence, now that her name was learned, resulted in the consummation of his hopes, and she became the wife of Hugh White.

CENTENNIAL CELEBRATION.

PRELIMINARY MEETING.

It having been proposed by some of the descendants of Captain Isaac Lawrence to hold a centennial family meeting, in the house built by him in Canaan, Litchfield county, Connecticut, in 1751, a few of them met there October 18th, 1851, and after a short conference resolved to hold such a meeting, at one o'clock in the afternoon of the ensuing Thanksgiving Day, and appointed

Isaac Lawrence of New York city,
Frederick Lawrence of Canaan, and Robert W. Adam of Pittsfield, Mass.,

a committee to carry the resolution into effect.

Frederick S. Pease of Albany, N.Y., and Isaac Lawrence of New York

were appointed a committee to prepare a short historical sketch of Captain Isaac Lawrence, his ancestry and posterity.

The following ladies were made a committee to provide a dinner for the occasion :

Mrs. Abiah Plumb,
Betsey L. Franklin, and Huldah T. Lawrence,

to be assisted by

Miss Charlotte L. Franklin,
Frances C. Adam, and Catharine C. Lawrence.

GENERAL MEETING OF THE LAWRENCE FAMILY.

PURSUANT to the call of the Committee of Arrangement, such of the descendants of Captain Isaac Lawrence as were able to be present, met at the house known as the Old Lawrence House, at one o'clock on Thanksgiving Day, Nov. 27, 1851.

On motion, the following gentlemen were made officers of the meeting:

William Lawrence of Canaan, President.

Harvey Lawrence of Canaan, Vice-President.

Robert W. Adam of Pittsfield, Mass., Secretary.

Mr. Frederick Lawrence read the following selections from the Scriptures:

Genesis xlvi, verse 1-7, and 26-30 ;

Deuteronomy vi, verse 1-15 ;

Psalm cxxxii ;

Psalm cxxv.

A fervent and impressive prayer was then offered to the throne of Divine Grace, by Deacon George K. Lawrence, after which the meeting united in singing the following ode, prepared for the occasion by Mrs. Huldah T. Lawrence :

ODE,

BY MRS. HULDAH H. TUCKERMAN, OF CANAAN.

Wife of Great Grandson George K. Lawrence.

'Tis here we meet in union sweet,
To celebrate the day
When thro' the woods, with all their goods,
Our fathers made their way.

They part with all they hold most dear,
From friends and former home ;
What tho' their minds are filled with fear,
They'll trust for time to come.

Beneath them was the cold, damp ground,
Above the threatening sky,
While snow was falling fast around,
And savage beasts were nigh.

When morning dawned, upon the ground
Their tracks were plainly seen,
The little children wondered why
They had not eaten them.

'Twas God protected us from harm,
The pious father said,
Angels encamped around our path,
And all our footsteps led.

Their wanderings o'er, they shelter took
Beneath a sturdy oak,
And lo ! ere night a house was built
Beside a murmuring brook.

May we, their numerous progeny,
Be found in wisdom's ways,
That we together may unite
In endless songs of praise.

The historical sketch of the Lawrence family, prepared by the committee nominated for the purpose, was then read by Mr. F. S. Pease, of Albany. This sketch, embracing a general account of the Lawrence name, and a more particular one of the branch to which Captain Isaac Lawrence belonged, will be found in another part of this publication.

Mr. Robert W. Adam having been called upon to address the meeting, informally arose and said :

We have met to-day as a family whose members have long been wanderers from home, separated so long and so far from each other, that many of us come with strange faces and almost forgotten forms to rekindle the fire on the old hearth-stone, to fill up once more the family circle around it, and renew and strengthen those ties which a common relationship has thrown around us.

It is no part of our object to listen to formal addresses and studied discourses ; we wish for a family talk, we wish to relate each to the other the history of our wanderings and experience, to proffer and receive the sympathy and encouragement which is the boon of a family meeting.

We have listened with interest to the history of our ancestors, as it has been read by the gentleman who has on a former occasion bestowed so much care and labor on its collection, and has so kindly assisted in preparing suitable portions of it for us to-day.

It is but a mere table of names, ages and dates ; but were we disposed to enter into a train of serious reflection, we could easily there find food for our thoughts.

He has referred us to the story of a skeptic, who once chancing to take up the scriptures, turned to the genealogical chapters of the old testament ; and as he read the names of those who were born, filled the measure of their days and died, he was led to think of the common destiny of all men, coming one after another upon the stage of being, spending the brief hour of their existence, and passing away for ever.

The thought led him to reflect on what was also awaiting him, and resulted in a serious attention to his condition, and a preparation for the change which he realized must eventually take place.

So we, on hearing the story of generation after generation of our ancestors who have passed before us, ought to realize that soon our history will likewise be written and our life's account close for ever.

This is one of the legitimate objects of a meeting like this. We are assembled on a day long observed as one of festivity and thanksgiving throughout the New England States. But while we indulge in the free and joyous intercourse which always marks such an occasion, it is likewise incumbent on us to remember that each anniversary of such a day brings with it a change in the circle ; old faces are gone and new ones appear.

But this is not a meeting of an ordinary character. Centennial meetings of counties and towns, and even of families are not unknown ; but we meet as a family, under the same roof which sheltered our ancestors a hundred years ago.

The same fireside around which we are gathered, and the same walls which encircle us, warmed them and closed around them a century ago. We shall never see another such occasion !

There are here to-day the gray-haired old man, just ready to step off the stage of life, and the infant essaying its first steps on its threshold. But before another century has rolled around, we shall all, old and young alike, have passed away.

This old house may yet be standing, another and a similar circle may then be gathered on the same spot, and the story of this day's proceedings may be read to them as the history of an event whose actors long since passed away.

Should such a thing transpire, may they recur to the history of their ancestors with as much pleasure as we do to that of ours. Our fathers were not great men, as we usually understand greatness. They left no name to fame; they did not accumulate wealth so as to enrich us; but they left us for an inheritance an unsullied name. They were men of integrity, stern and uncompromising; and we shall have lived well if we leave the family name as unblemished as we received it.

Many of us meet to-day strangers to each other; our fortunes have led us in different paths, but assembled here we feel that we have found a common home, and that a common feeling binds us together. Let then all restraint be laid aside, and freedom be given to that familiar interchange of sentiment so appropriate to the home fireside. The few short hours we are to spend together to-day, if thus improved, will be an unfailing source of pleasure to us all through life, and memory will ever revert to this scene as one of the brightest spots in the history of our lives.

At the conclusion of Mr. Adam's remarks, Mr. Isaac Lawrence addressed the children present, as follows:

"It has just been said with much truth, that we who are together to-day, ought to find more substantial comfort and derive greater advantages from our assemblage than we commonly do on thanksgiving occasions; for as has also been remarked, such a meeting as this is not common. We shall never attend another which will be to us just like it. We ought therefore to feel that we have not come together merely to feast and talk and laugh, but we should try to learn something from the history of our ancestors that will be of use to us as long as we live.

There is, children, something about the character of a good man, that is always pleasant for us to keep in remembrance. Have you never felt that the effect was good and healthful upon you, to call to your recollection some excellent person whom you have known, or of whom you have heard or read? I presume you have; and when that person is a relative this good influence should be doubly felt—its effect should be twice as happy upon you as under other circumstances.

It is said of a person of whom I have recently been reading, “his children’s richest inheritance is their father’s good name.” We, then, ought to feel that we have an invaluable legacy in the good name of our ancestor; for a good name indeed he has left us; and if we will imitate his example and copy his good ways, we may make this worth more to us than large sums of money, or large estates in land. We hope we have inherited some of his excellent qualities, and in order to find whether we have or not, we must exercise ourselves in a way to call them forth; that is, try to be as active and as useful, as good, as kind, and as charitable, as he was. If we will do all this I doubt not we shall soon discover that there is a little of his energetic and benevolent blood now coursing in our veins.

As you have already heard, there are many persons now living, who remember our great grandfather Isaac, and these persons were acquainted with others who knew him long and intimately; so that the testimony they gave us may be regarded as reliable; and they all speak in the highest terms of his character, and say they never knew a bad thing about him. We do not mean by this, that he was perfect and never did any thing wrong ; but his general course was so correct, and his habits and manners of life such as to secure almost universal esteem and confidence ; he was respected and looked up to more than the generality of people. We can not learn that he had any enemies. One person who was his neighbor, twenty years, and who is still living, says : " Nobody ever disliked old Capt. Isaac—if all the world were like him, it would do very well." Other testimony we have of the same kind. There is one thing, in particular, about his course which we should remember, and if we will keep it in mind and do likewise, it will be one of our greatest safe-guards. It is this : He adhered to the good principles which he brought with him when he came here.

There are some, who when they go from home away off in a new country, throw off the restraints of early days and listen to evil suggestions, act unjustly, take advantage of their neighbors and do other bad things ; but our ancestor was not such a man as this ; though he was a long way from his home and his relations, and in a new country, he remembered the good instruction he had received in his childhood, and seems to have taken as much pains to nourish and strengthen them in his own heart, and plant them in the hearts of all around him, as he did to improve the soil he had cultivated. This is the way for us to do : remember what pious parents and friends have taught us in our childhood, carry these good principles with us wherever we go, act when away from home just as we would at home, and we shall get along well enough.

Our great grandfather loved children. It is said that he used to have something to say to almost every boy and girl he met ; and after he was so old and infirm as to be unable to go out, he would sit in the door facing the street, in his large arm-chair, and call the children to him as they were passing, and talk with them. One of his great grandchildren, who is with us to-day, remembers being here one bright summer morning, and going and lying on the large step-stone in front of this house. Pretty soon the old gentleman came, walking with the two staves he had to use in his old age, and with one of them good-naturedly poked him over, and asked him to get up and pull his chair to the door that he might sit down.

He was a pleasant man. One of his grandchildren, and the only one present to-day, lived in the house with him six of the last years of his life, and carried in wood for him and piled it up in the corner of his room every day ; and of course, saw a great deal of him at an age and under pains and infirmities when we suppose he might have shown irritable feelings if ever ; and yet, he says, he never saw him angry but once, and then from such a cause as would have made it difficult for any one to restrain such a feeling. Others who have him distinctly in remembrance, have told me that his uniformly pleasant expression of countenance is one of the plainest things in their recollection.

He was a man, too, who accomplished something.

His long life was not wasted and trifled away. He acquired large possessions by his remarkable activity and industry, and many of the tall trees of the forest were felled by his own hand. Doubtless it was by this kind of exercise that he acquired the great muscular strength he possessed, and the robust health he enjoyed until long past the age of three score and ten. He attained a position in society which gave him influence, and this, as we have before said, he exerted effectually for its improvement and for the elevation of all around him.

And he was a Christian.

How early he became so, we have no means of knowing; but we know that he did not defer the consideration of this important subject until the latest period of his life.

Many incidents have been related to us which showed that he lived not wholly for himself, and I have no doubt that could we be made acquainted with more particulars in his personal history, we should find that here lay the great secret of his excellent private character, and success in this world's pursuits. "Godliness is profitable unto all things, having promise of the life that now is and of that which is to come." Let us then, as we believe he did, live with a holy and benevolent aim; with a desire and a purpose to accomplish something for good, making God's Word the rule of our lives, and we may then feel assured that whatever we have to contend with here, our best interests will be promoted for time and for eternity.

The meeting was then adjourned till seven o'clock, for the thanksgiving dinner.

The old "ball room" had been tastefully decorated for the occasion by the ladies, who had charge of the dinner arrangements, and two long tables extended through the length of the room, well furnished with the good cheer which is characteristic of a New England thanksgiving dinner, bore testimony to the fact that the committee had well performed the duty assigned them.

From the center of the ceiling hung suspended the old tin chandelier, a familiar relic of old times, to all who were acquainted with the house and its furniture.

The walls were hung with evergreens, and the dates "1751," and "1851," wrought in laurel leaves, and encircled with leaves of the ground pine, were seen in a conspicuous position above the tables.

The family being all seated around the tables, the Divine blessing was implored by Mr. John Franklin, of Canaan.

The dinner which followed was a feast of good things, rendered doubly acceptable by the happy hearts and cheerful countenances of those who partook of it.

After a suitable season spent in eating, different members of the family were called on for brief and informal remarks.

Mr. Orange Lawrence, of Canada West, said :

“ He was grateful that he could enjoy the privilege of being present on this occasion. The associations were of the most pleasing kind ; the scenery of the place, though considerably changed from what it was when he knew it, the occurrences of his childhood and riper years, were dwelt on with pleasure. Most of the familiar faces were gone, and he found himself surrounded by kindred he had never before met. He referred to the resolution he formed to leave his native place and seek a new home. He had been successful ; in the wilds of Canada he had made a home, and made the wilderness to blossom as the rose.

He spoke briefly of the government of his adopted country, and said that it was not well understood by all in the States, nor properly appreciated by all in the province ; that it was conservative in all its provisions, mild in its administration, promotive of the happiness of its subjects, and in no way calculated to obstruct familiar intercourse with the people of the States.

Mr. F. S. Pease, of Albany, spoke of coincidences ; things which happened a hundred years ago, none of which, though of considerable importance, were more so to the world than the event of the settlement of our progenitor in his new home, a hundred years ago, was to his descendants.

He said this was a great day for the family—the great characteristic of 1851 for the Lawrences, as the great Exhibition in London has been said to be the great characteristic of 1851 for England.

Distant nations there met face to face harmoniously, here kindred members of a large family came from afar to interchange sentiments of friendship. He spoke of the results of the meeting, which were presently manifest in the mutual enjoyment of those present; and of future results which should arise from the increased frequency of such meetings by other families.

Following the gentleman from Canada, he alluded to the institutions of this country, and our own free and independent States, depending for the vitality and cement of their union upon the harmonious union of families of different sections.

Mr. Isaac Lawrence, of New York, offered the following sentiment :

Our absent relatives. Providentially prevented from participating with us in the wholesome pleasure of this festival. We would here assure them of our affection and our sympathy with them in their varied circumstances, “rejoicing with them that do rejoice and weeping with them that weep.”

A general conversation ensued until the time to which the meeting was adjourned had arrived.

EVENING MEETING.

The exercises of the evening meeting were opened by the following hymn, written by Miss Julia L. Norton, of Nashville, Tenn., a member of the family.

The shades of night are gathering round,
The parting hour draws near,
But first a hymn of praise shall rise
From all assembled here.

God of our Fathers ! Thou to whom
All gratitude belongs,
To thee we would with loving hearts
Address our joyful songs.

Upon life's path thy love divine
Hath shed its constant light,
And thou hast brought us all to meet
In love and peace to-night.

But while we sing of present joy,
A tear still dims the eye ;
The memory of our loved and lost
Calls from each heart a sigh.

And when the shades of death shall close
Around this kindred band,
O may we all united be
In the bright promised land.

Mr. Isaac Lawrence read letters which the committee had received from Mrs. Amanda M. Benedict of N.Y., Mrs. C. M. Burnett of N.Y., Mr. Andrew Kingsbury of Rush, N.Y., Mr. William Dunham of New York, Miss Julia L. Norton of Nashville, Tenn., Mr. Lucius Southwick of Mount Morris, and Mr. Jonas Lawrence of Newark, N.Y. They all expressed lively regret at their necessary absence from the meeting, and nearly all contributed some facts in regard to the history and location of the Lawrence family, which are incorporated into the genealogical account contained in another part of this volume. A very kind note was also read from the Rev. Elisha Whittlesey, the pastor of the Congregational Church of North Canaan, who had been invited to attend the evening meeting.

On motion of Mr. Pease, it was voted that William and Isaac Lawrence be appointed a committee to procure funds and erect a plain monument over the grave of Captain Isaac Lawrence.

Voted, That a committee be appointed to publish an account of the day's proceedings, in connection with a revised genealogical history of the family, and that there be inserted in the pamphlet a view of the old house, and of the step-stone at the front door.

Mr. F. S. Pease and Robert W. Adam were made the committee.

Mr. William Adam, of Canaan, made a few remarks on the importance of each family preserving its own history, and the utility of such records in making up the history of the country.

A subscription paper was circulated, and the funds necessary for the erection of the monument and the publication of the pamphlet resolved on, were promptly raised. The following poems, written by members of the family, were then read :

OUR CENTENNIAL MEETING.

Once more within a home we meet ;
Draw up around the kitchen fire ;
Give to the youth that wooden seat,
That arm-chair to the grey-haired sire.

Cold blows the wind outside the door,
 And loud the pine tree breathes its moan,
 But 'round this fireside we're secure—
 The fireside of our new-found home.

Bright shine those flames arising high,
 And warm the embers glow below,*
 But brighter shines affection's eye,
 The hearts of kindred warmer glow.

We all the wanderer's staff have borne,
 Together trod a weary way ;
 Our hearts from a loved home once torn,
 Can prize the fireside found to-day.

A hundred years their course have flown,
 A century is now complete,
 Since first around this old hearth-stone
That family circle took their seat.

Long since on earth their work was o'er,
 Long since was closed their life's brief page ;
 Those youthful shouts are heard no more,
 Nor prudent counsels of that sage.

What though on herald's blazoned book,
 To find their name we search in vain ;
 A title from their God they took,
 Of Nature's Nobles,—honest men.

They left to us nor wealth nor fame,
 A nobler legacy they gave :
 They left us an unsullied name ;
 Be ours the task to guard it safe.

Upon this spot to-day we'll rear,
 In memory of our Father's worth,
 A monument that shall endure
 Beyond the fleeting things of earth.

Our hearts shall form the pedestal,
 And from the base a shaft shall rise,
 Of gratitude that ever shall
 Point towards their mansions in the skies.

* The old fire-places, which had been closed by modern improvements, were opened for the occasion, and old-fashioned wood fires made in them.

Affection's finger there shall trace
In characters that shall survive,
The record of our heart-felt praise,
The story of their honest lives.

Around the shaft a wreath we'll twine,
A wreath of grateful memory's flowers
That shall not fade at touch of time ;
We'll water it with tearful showers.

We too are wanderers ; our feet
A toilsome, rugged road must tread ;
Wild woods at every turn we meet,
Whose dark leaves shade the sky o'er-head.

We shall not all meet here again,
Fortune leads each a different way ;
But memory ever shall retain
The grateful labors of to-day.

Up to this spot as to a shrine,
Our pilgrim thoughts shall often come ;
Their filial offerings to bind
Upon this altar of our home.

Another hundred years shall fly,
Another century, and we,
Poor mould'ring heaps of dust, shall lie,
Our spirits in eternity.

Our pilgrim band to-day we've traced
Through lingering march, 'neath shaded skies ;
They found a sunny vale at last,
A home each weary one could prize.

May we so live that when the space
Of life's allotted course is run,
We'll stand before our Father's face,
United in a Heavenly home.

SONG OF THE OLD LOOM.*

Oh, many years have flitted by
 Since I was blithe and gay,
Since I toss'd my sinewy arms on high,
 Or softly bowed to the gentle sway
Of the low-voiced zephyrs that came at e'en
To steal a kiss from my branches green.

Deep was the solemn silence here
 Within the lonely wood,
When in leafy grandeur many a year
 In beauty's pride I stood.
Through that solitude scarce a sound was heard,
Save the soft love-song of some gentle bird.

But man that peaceful bower invades,
 The sleeping echoes awoke,
And loudly through those summer shades
 Resounds the lusty stroke,
And one by one around me fell
The leafy tenants of the dell.

And ere were seen the golden hues
 That autumn's wealth reveals,
I was doomed my native grace to lose
 By the blow the woodman deals.
Then a wearisome life of darkest gloom
I led for years, a toiling loom.

Yet time, contentment oft bequeaths,
 A gift of blessed power ;
Outshining far the summer wreaths
 That form fair beauty's dower,
Contentment mine ; my humble lay
Cheered many a stormy winter's day.

But now my life's long labor o'er,
 Sweet peace is mine at last ;
And thrown aside, I'm prized no more,
 Save as a relic of the past ;

* See list of " Family Relics," exhibited on the occasion.

For many a year of toil I've seen,
 Since I waved on high my branches green.

Oh, ye who boast of wealth, or power,
 Or beauty, list to me.
 Prize not those gifts ; a single hour
 May bear them far from thee ;
 Yet will they bless thee, mortal, when
 Thou us't them for thy fellow-men.*

The following appropriate lines which were read at the meeting, were written by Sprague, on the occasion of an accidental family gathering.

We are all here,
 Father, mother,
 Sister, brother,
 All who hold each other dear.
 Each chair is filled, we're all at home,
 To-night let no cold stranger come ;
 It is not often thus around
 Our old familiar hearth we're found ;
 Bless then the meeting and the spot,
 For once be every care forgot,
 Let gentle peace assert her power,
 And kind affection rule the hour.
 We 're all, all here.

We 're not all here.
 Some are away ! the dead ones dear
 Who thronged with us this ancient hearth
 And gave the hour of guiltless mirth.
 Fate with a stern, relentless hand,
 Looked in and thinned our little band.
 Some like a night-flash passed away,
 And some sank lingering, day by day ;
 The quiet grave-yard—some lie there,
 And cruel ocean has his share.
 We 're not all here.

* A vote of thanks was passed to the writer of the Song of the Loom.

We are all here.
 Even they—the dead, though dead, so dear,
 Fond memory to her duty true,
 Brings back their faded forms to view.
 How life-like through the mist of years
 Each well-remembered face appears ;
 We see them as in times long past ;
 From each to each, kind looks are cast ;
 We hear their words, their smiles behold ;
 They 're round us as they were of old.

We are all here.

We are all here :
 Father, mother,
 Sister, brother ;
 You that I love with love so dear.
 This may not long of us be said,
 Soon must we join the gathered dead,
 And by the hearth we now sit 'round
 Some other circle will be found.
 Oh, then, that wisdom may we know
 That yields a life of peace below :
 So in the world to follow this
 May each repeat in words of bliss—
 We 're all, all here.

The following closing hymn, written by Miss Charlotte L. Franklin, was sung to the tune of Old Hundred.

CLOSING HYMN.

BY CHARLOTTE L. FRANKLIN, OF CANAAN,
 one of the great great grandchildren.

Old Hundred.

OUR Father, bless us as we leave
 This place which memory holds most dear,
 And to each spirit deign to give
 Thy grace, and grant thy presence near.
 Thy providence did'st safely guide
 Our fathers through the wilds so drear ;
 O'er all their steps thou did'st preside,
 Nor suffer once their hearts to fear.

Thy bounteous hand their labors blessed,
 Beneath their stroke the forest fell,
 And in this vale in beauty dressed,
 They reared this home we love so well.

A century has rolled away
 Since first they trod upon this soil,
 And we their children here to-day,
 Recount with pride their noble toil.

Oh ! may we in their footsteps tread,
 Our hearts replete with mutual love,
 And by a Father's hand be led
 Till we together meet above.

On motion of Mr. Pease, the meeting then adjourned for one hundred years.

The committee of arrangement made an effort to collect as many of the old family keepsakes as possible, for exhibition at the meeting. They succeeded in gathering the following :

A Loom, made from the oak tree under which Capt. Isaac Lawrence and family encamped the night after their arrival in Canaan, June 2, 1738. The owner of this loom having presented it to the descendants in common, it has been now put up in the old house, and can be at all times seen by any of the family who may visit the place.

Capt. Isaac Lawrence's warrant as an Ensign in the "Train Band of Canaan," signed by Jonathan Law, Governor of the Colony of Connecticut, and Geo. Wyllys, Secretary ; dated the 28th of October, in the twenty-second year of King George the Second, A.D., 1748. This is in the possession of Mr. Andrew Kingsbury, of Rush, N. Y., one of the grand children of Isaac Lawrence.

A Wooden Bowl, made from the wart of a tree ; a small Brass Kettle ; a Calico Pocket. In possession of Mrs. Tryphena Dixon, Egremont, Mass. ; formerly belonging to Mrs. Isaac Lawrence.

A Red Cloth Cloak ; a pair of Shoes, embroidered on red woollen cloth ; a pair of Stays ; a pewter Platter, Basin, and Porringer ; a Wine Glass, and Glass Milk Cup ; a string of Gold Beads, and Finger Ring. Now in possession of Mrs. Dixon, and formerly owned by Mrs. Jonas Lawrence, and others of his family.

A Sheep-Brand. Formerly Isaac Lawrence's, now with Wm. Lawrence, of Canaan.

A Newspaper, printed at Litchfield, January, 1794, containing the advertisement of Isaac Lawrence's executors.

An Earthen Bowl, Isaac Lawrence's, now with Mrs. Wm. Adam.

A Wine Glass, Isaac Lawrence's, now with Mrs. Betsey Franklin.

A Pewter Mug, Isaac Lawrence's, now with Mrs. Betsey Franklin.

A Continental $50 bill, now in possession of Mr. Wm. Lawrence.

Family Record of Jonas Lawrence, 1st son of Isaac Lawrence, mostly in hand-writing of his wife Tryphena, now in possession of Wm. Adam.

A Powder Horn, with inscriptions and figures, dated 1756, now with Wm. Lawrence.

A Hone, now with Wm. Lawrence.

A Chandelier ; a Box for Pipes and Tobacco. Formerly the property of Josiah Lawrence. The chandelier is left in the old house ; the tobacco box is in possession of Robt. W. Adam.

There are other articles of the like nature in the possession of different members of the family, which could not be procured for exhibition at the time. Among these are :

A Brass Clock, made in —, once owned by Isaac Lawrence, now with Mrs. Abiah Plumb.

A Looking-Glass, now with Abiah Plumb.

The Cartridge Box of Isaac Lawrence ; a Wooden Chest of Isaac Lawrence ; a Table of Isaac Lawrence. Now with Elisha Forsyth, of Owego, N. Y.

After the close of the meeting, an hour was pleasantly spent around the spacious fire-place in the old bar-room ; nuts, apples, and parched corn, were served up in primitive style, and the old pipe and tobacco box were called into use by some of the elders, who had often, in times past, on the same spot, indulged in its soothing influences. At ten o'clock the company separated, and the old house was again left to silence, and its guests scattered, probably never again to be united, yet each carrying away a lively recollection of a day pleasantly and profitably employed.

There were present at the meeting seventy-five persons. Of these, seventy-four were connected with the family, either by descent or marriage, and one a member by adoption. The names and ages of those present were collected in a small autograph book, which has been left with Mr. William Adam, of Canaan, for preservation.

Names of the descendants of Capt. Isaac Lawrence, present at their centennial meeting in the old house at Canaan, Thursday, November 27, 1851—Thanksgiving day.
